FLIER DOWN NEAR ST. JOHN

TOO TIRED TO CONTINUE ON TO NEW YORK

Mollison, Scottish Ace, First to Cross From Europe to America All Alone

St. John, New Brunswick, Aug. 19 (INS)—Exhausted by a long battle against fog and storm, Capt. James A. Mollison, Scottish airman, laned his tiny Puss Moth plane "Heart's Content" in Pennfield, 40 miles from here, this afternoon, completing the first solo flight from Europe to America in the history of aviation.

Mollison's flight ended here at 1:55 p. m. local time (12.55 p. m. E. D. T.), 30 hours and 20 minutes after he took off from Portmarnock Beach, near Dublin, Ireland.

Throughout the morning, reports received here told of Mollison's grim battle against the elements in his efforts to complete the first straight-line solo flight from Ireland to New York.

TOO TIRED, HE SAYS

Balked in his attempt to reach New York without a stop as the first leg of the first round trip transatlantic flight ever attempted, Mollison dropped upon the tiny settlement and gave himself up to the hospitality of the villagers.

"I am too tired to go on," he said.

Visibly exhausted, he willingly took advantage of the hospitality tendered him by the surprised residents of Pennfield. With the entire population in his train, he staggered off to the home of one of the villagers and sat down to rest for the first time in almost a day and a half.

A short while before the landing, Mollison's plane had been sighted over St. John. Although his gasoline supply was badly depleted, he apparently was determined at the time to cover as much distance as possible, but a few minutes later decided that it would be risky to proceed further in his physical condition.

INTENDED TO PUSH ON.

Mollison's original plans called for a landing at Harbor Grace, N. F., to refuel. He then planned to fly to New York, rest for a day and then fly back to Ireland, hoping to complete the entire round trip in four days, at the outside.

When he left Portmarnock, however, he said he might try to make New York without a stop, if his gasoline held out. This was believed to be the reason why he was not sighted over Newfoundland as the motor of his tiny plane pulled him speedily toward his goal.

"I passed Harbor Grace and Halifax this morning and went over St. John at noon," he said. "I hoped to get on to New York, but when I got this far I was so tired that I just couldn't go on."

All through the night, he said, he flew through clouds and heavy mists. During the last 1 hours the weather was especially bad.

Hurrying Stork Rams Into Taxi

Baby McLellan was ushered into the world today inthe City Hospital but not without giving police and hospital attendants as well as his daddy and a taxicab driver, a little work and worry.

It was during one of the busiest traffic hours of the day when Mrs. Celia McLellan of Ferrin st., Charlestown, started for the hospital in a car driven by her husband, James.

So worried was the husband, he told police that he took a chance on a red light at Washington st. and Broadway and went through.

He didn't go far, however, for a taxicab operated by Edward Driscoll of Norwell pl., Dorchester, appearing on the green light, struck the hurrying McLellan car and bounced it across the intersection and into Prince G. Neary, 48, of 6 Dickson pl., Prince is also South End.

When the cars were untangled Neary went with the McLellans to City Hospital and while he was being treated for fractured ribs Bob McLellan came into the world. He was none the worse for his experience, nor were his mother and daddy.

AUTHOR WILLS ALL TO FRIEND

New York, Aug. 19 (AP)—The will of Henry Erskine Smith, Civil War veteran, author and playwright, filed for probate here today, left the entire estate of "not over $60,000" to Miss Renee Varicle of New London, Conn., described as "a long and cherished friend of my family." Smith died at New London, Conn., on March 8 of this year. He was 90 years old.

The petition for probate names Kane F. Smith of Brookline, Mass., as a person "claiming to be the widow."

The testament, made on March 20, 1930, appointed Miss Varicle a sole executrix and instructed her to oppose any contest of the will.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., speeding to the deathbed of his sister, Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, in Chicago, crossed Boston twice and left on the Twentieth Century Limited at 1:30 p. m.

His wife accompanied him. They arrived from Northeast Harbor, Me., at the North station, took a cab across the city to the South station, and a short time later, were on their way westward.

Mrs. McCormick is now in a coma and has been given up by physicians, who announced that the end was but a few hours away.

Her brother hopes to reach her bedside before she dies. He will arrive in Chicago early tomorrow.

SILVERMAN IN DOLE ATTACK ON HULTMAN

Says He Prosecutes Frauds as the Police Talk; Council Backs Up on Probe Plan

Hurling taunts at Police Commissioner Hultman, Corporation Counsel Samuel Silverman, head of the city law department, today stepped to the forefront of the welfare fraud investigation, making four city departments in the field, all at odds with one another.

Silverman asserted that the law department, making an independent investigation, had already saved the city large sums of money—acting and getting results, while the police were talking.

When the police announced certain welfare plotters were being sought for arrest, the men in question were already under arrest as a result of action by the law department, said Silverman.

DOLE PAYS POLITICAL DEBTS

When police announced a recipient of aid had been discovered with a lot of money in the bank, the law department had already had him arrested and attached his bank funds, the city law head added.

Other developments in the welfare situation, in which widespread racketeering was originally revealed by the Boston Evening American, were:

BOSTON—City Council backs down, cancels its scheduled investigation of the welfare department. Councillor Brackman says he will demand a probe, because the public will think the councillors are afraid the lightning will strike them.

Recurring rumors that police have been asked to "go easy" and not take many cases to court.

CAMBRIDGE—Eight more dropped from welfare list. Thirty new applicants refused aid. Two more cases of "serious fraud" discovered by police. One man receiving aid for a year, while working, will be prosecuted.

WATERTOWN — Welfare Director Daniel H. Murphy continues probe of frauds. Fifteen dropped from list. Restitution demanded from some, with threat of arrest. Town meeting to be asked to appropriate $60,000 more for relief, making a total for the year of about $300,000. Tax rate increase of $2 expected.

Paul Block in Albany to Back Up Walker

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 19 (INS)—John J. Curtin, counsel for Mayor James J. Walker, resumed argument for dismissal of Samuel Seabury's removal charges when Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt re-convened the public hearing on the Walker case here this afternoon.

At the same time Paul Block, newspaper publisher, appeared in the executive chamber ready to testify for the mayor.

Block, out of friendship, he testified before the Hofstadter legislative committee, established a stock brokerage account out of which Mr. Walker withdrew $246,000.

Curtin, in his argument, turned back to the charges involving Russell T. Sherwood, missing accountant, who Seabury, counsel to the Hofstadter committee, held was Walker's financial agent, handling almost $1,000,000 for the New York City executive.

Curtin's argument for dismissing the Sherwood conclusion was based on a contention that Mayor Walker's dealings wit hSherwood had nothing to do with his official life.

"There is no evidence whatevr," Curtin said, "that the money deposited in Sherwood's various accounts dig in fact belong to the mayor."

COURT HEARING MONDAY

Earlier in the day, Curtin and other attorneys in Supreme Court before Justice Ellis J. Staley in connection with two separate writs, both seeking to restrain the governor from acting on the question of Walker's removal.

Curtin appeared on petition of Walker to restrain the governor from removing him, and was granted a delay until Monday to argue his contentions.

Atty. Sidney Levine, representing George Donnelly, home rule advocate of New York, argued on a court order he had obtained temporarily restraining the governor from rendering a decision. After hearing Levine's argument, Justice Staley reserved decision.

Rose Sherwood, Writer, Queried n Walkeir Case

New York, Aug. 19 (AP)—The name "Mrs. R. T. Sherwood," on the passenger list of the liner Deutschland, in today from Europe, caused excitement among customs and immigration inspectors.

The excitement subsided when the women traveling under that name explained that she was not the wife of Russell T. Sherwood, missing Walker case witness, but is the wife of Robert T. Silverman of New York.

"I wrote under the name of Rose T. Sherwood," she explained, "and never dreamed I would be subjected to so many questions.

"No matter where I gave my nom de plume abroad some one wanted to know if I was the wife of the Sherwood mentioned in the Walker investigation."

SELLING FORCES STOCKS DOWN

New York, Aug. 19 (AP)—Quiet selling swept over the stock market today, depressing several issues $1 to $3 a-share under yesterday's final levels, after the market had enjoyed a short-lived upturn in the early trading.

Announcement of the formation of Commodities Credit Corp. with authorized funds of $50,000,000 from which to extend credit to finance the movement of raw materials to manufacturers, was greeted with a brief display of enthusiasm, but bankers scotched rumors of a "pool" to boost commodity prices, pointing out that the fund would perform a conservative banking function.

U. S. Steel not only lost an early gain of $1, but by early afternoon touched $40.62, off 75 cents, net. Case dropped about $3 to around $52. Union Pacific was off $1 to around $70. Allied Chemical receded about $2 to close at $77. American Telephone declined more than $1, going under $111.

The sag appeared to be influenced partly by a decline of around 1 cent a bushel in wheat. Selling of shares was in light volume, however.

2 Army Fliers Saved Twice in Sea Fires

Norwalk, Conn., Aug. 19 (AP)—Two West Point officers were rescued twice last night when the seaplane they were flying from Cape Cod to New York caught fire, forcing them to alight on Long Island Sound near Sheffield Island. Frederick Field and his son, cottagers on Betts' Island, brought the officers ashore after the fire was extinguished. On the return trip to Sheffield, however, Fields' motorboat caught fire and its occupants jumped overboard. Residents went to their aid.

MRS. TUNNEY IS ILL IN PARIS

Paris, Aug. 19 (INS)—Mrs. James J. "Gene" Tunney, the former Polly Lauder, underwent an operation for an abscessed ear at the American Hospital today.

The operation was necessitated by a cold contracted aboard the liner Bremen while en route to Europe. Surgeons at the hospital lanced the abcess and no further operation was believed necessary.

The operation was the second Mrs. Tunney has undergone in Europe. While she and her husband were honeymooning on a tiny island off the Italian Coast about two years ago, she was stricken with an abdominal ailment which necessitated an emergency operation.

Boston Salesman Suicide in Andover

North Andover, Aug. 19 (AP)—Byron Westran, 34, a Boston paper salesman, was found dead in the garage of the home of his brother-in-law, Melvin Westran, here today.

Medical Examiner Victor A. Reed said carbon monoxide gas from the exhaust of his car had killed Westran and pronounced him a suicide.

Hollywood, Aug. 19 (INS)—Warner Brothers today offered a film contract to Eleanor Holm, star swimmer of the United States Olympic women's team.

BETTE DAVIS IS WED IN YUMA

Bette Davis, Hollywood film star, who was Ruth Elizabeth Davis five years back when she attended Newton high school with her stage thrills only a dream, was married yesterday in Yuma, Ariz., to Harmon O. Nelson, Jr., of Whitinsville, according to word received in Newton today.

Nelson, an orchestra leader and a graduate last year of Massachusetts State College, met Miss Davis while both were students at Cushing Academy in Ashburnham.

During the Olympic games in Los Angeles, Nelson was a member of the huge Olympic band composed of many orchestras and playing daily in the stadium.

The bride is 23 years old and was graduated from Newton High School in 1927. She stepped into an actress role after finishing at Cushing Academy, her first appearance on the stage being made with Blanche Yurka in Ibsen's "Wild Duck."

Her success in her small part secured for her then a real role in "Broken Dishes," which had a considerable run on Broadway and which played the Wilbur Theater in Boston.

While with "Broken Dishes" she was given a screen test, and then went for Hollywood for the start of her movie career ith John Boles in "Seed." Her Yankee accent won her the lead in "Way Back Home," and her star has been steadily rising on the west coast.

Her parents now live in Lowell.

Comb North and West Ends for Racketeers

All available members of the headquarters detective force were ordered by Police Commissioner Hultman to join the war on business racketeering today.

The commissioner suddenly commanded Capt. John M. Anderson to throw every resource of the bureau of criminal investigation into the check-up of local gangsters who are "organizing" dyers, cleaners and Italian bakers by "strong-arm" methods with a view to extortion.

"This is a racket and a very serious situation," said the commissioner. "Get it while it's young. Nip it in the bud now and it will save us a lot of trouble later on.

Immediately after receipt of the commissioner's instructions, Capt. Anderson ordered additional detectives into the north and west ends to question every dyer, cleaner and baker in the area, as well as question suspected gangsters.

ASKED TO REPORT

The merchants were instructed to report any approach by gangsters, any threat or any intimation of violence. A number of gangsters will be questioned even if there is no direct evidence against them in the belief that such police activity will have a tendency to force abandonment of their plans.

It was revealed that local racketeers more than a month ago had invited dye house owners to meet in a Back Bay hotel. Two police inspectors, posing as owners, attended, took note of the men present.

The shop men were summoned to headquarters and questioned by Deputy Supt. McDevitt. All declared they had refused to join the organization.

PLANNED TO COLLECT $5000

Police said the racketeers told the owners they planned to collect $5000, which would put them on "easy street." They said this would be done by destroying business of competitors. One is alleged to have declared he had "enough stuff in his backyard to destroy the business of owners who wouldn't join." Police believe he referred to acid.

Police officials pointed out to the owners that they would be foolish to join such an organization because they would find themselves at the mercy of financial demands of the racketeers.

FITZGERALD SEES ROOSEVELT AND GARNER SWEEP

ENORMOUSLY STRONG, SAYS EX-MAYOR

Hoover Will Be Beaten as Badly as Taft, Declares Boston's Veteran Observer

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

"If New England shows any of the overwhelming enthusiasm I have seen for Governor Roosevelt in the West and South, he will sweep this country by the greatest majority in history."

Thus spoke John F. Fitzgerald, veteran of 40 years in the political arena and one of the most astute observers of political trends.

The "Honey Boy," who can still pedal a neat one-step or warble "Sweet Adeline" to the satisfaction of any audience despite his near 70 years of age, is back with Mrs. Fitzgerald from the Olympiad in Los Angeles. And this is what he says, after looking over the political ripples of public sentiment in more than 20 States:

GARNER PRAISED

"Roosevelt and Garner are enormously strong. I was astonished by the unanimous sentiment for them. The West and South look upon Roosevelt as a liberal leader and Garner as a strong, courageous legislator who talks in plain language at a time when this country needs plain talk and strong leadership.

"Hoover is not admired. He has not shown the 'great qualities' which were attributed to him in the campaign of four years ago.

"The farmers of the West are on strike, refusing to deliver their goods to market for the disastrously low prices which awaits them. The willing toilers are idle. The businessmen of the West have more confidence and industry than our Eastern capitalists, and their feeling is that they will fight their way out of the depression despite the handicap of Hoover. They want a change, and they see the chance to make a satisfactory change to a liberal like Roosevelt and a determined, rugged figure like Garner.

SAME WHITE HOUSE GANG

"The Westerners note the White House conferences and observe that the President has surrounded himself with the old gang—including the speculative bankers, the stock pluggers and the tipsters responsible for the orgy of counterfeit prosperity which plunged our country into the frightful depression with all the hardship imposed upon our people.

"Under these conditions, Roosevelt is certain to receive a more overwhelming electoral college majority than Wilson, while Hoover will be as badly beaten as Taft.

"I can not see that political conditions will be different in New England. Vermont talks seriously of giving that State to the Democrats. Maine will show a surprising strength for the Democratic candidate. And when the returns come in from Maine, all of New England, including Massachusetts notably, will be awakened and enlivened by the certain prospect of Democratic victory.

"The people want a change. And they are going to have it."

'Roosevelt, Hoover' in Head-On Crash

Des Moines, Ia., Aug. 19 (INS)—President Hoover and Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt are going to crash head-on at the Iowa State Fair Aug. 27.

Their names will be appended to railroad locomotives during a deliberate wreck. It was announced today. The engines will rush at each other on a track extending 3200 feet across the fair grounds.

The first train wreck at the State Fair was in 1904. One engine was named Bryan and the other McKinley. "McKinley" was almost demolished, but "Bryan" remained upright, its whistle blowing.

Garner Hitch-Hikes 80 Miles When Rain Grounds Plane

San Antonio, Tex., Aug. 19 (AP) John N. Garner, Democratic vice-presidential nominee, hitch-hiked into San Antonio early today on his way to his home in Uvalde to resume a vacation interrupted by political conferences in the East.

The Speaker traveled by airplane yesterday from Cincinnati to Austin.

The Texan traveled the 80 miles between Austin and San Antonio in a motor car with two young men, whose names were not learned. The men offered the Speaker a ride.

CURTIS' STAND BRINGS PRAISE

Topeka, Kas., Aug. 19 (AP)—Vice-President Charles Curtis said today he was "greatly pleased" with the reaction to his acceptance speech yesterday in which he expressed his personal opposition to repeal of the 18th amendment.

"I am greatly pleased with the many telegrams I have received," he said. "They have come already from about 25 states."

He said the telegrams singled out NO particular sections of his address for comment.

The end is only a matter of a few hours now, doctors say. (International News photo.)

CURTIS' STAND AS A DRY ADDS FUEL TO FIRE

Vice-President's Opposition to Prohibition Repeal Gives Him the Spotlight

Washington, Aug. 19 (AP)—Save for echoes of President Hoover's acceptance speech and the daily grist from the inquiry by Gov. Roosevelt into the case of Mayor Walker, vice-presidential nominees took over the national campaign as another week rolled by.

A high point for political discussion lay in Vice-President Curtis' unqualified declaration, in accepting renomination as Mr. Hoover's running mate, against repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

Yet, the excursion from his Texas home of Speaker Garner, Democratic rival for the vice-presidency, to attempt in person the enlistment of Alfred E. Smith and his New York and New England following in active support of the Roosevelt-Garner ticket vied for attention with the Curtis speech.

CURTIS ADDS FUEL

Curtis, speaking at his notification ceremonies at Topeka, added fuel to the fire of prohibition discussion precipitated by President Hoover's acceptance address a week earlier. With the exception of publication of Garner's acceptance letter, the notification pause of the campaign is now complete.

That Democratic orators will make much of any difference in prohibition views they may profess to detect on comparison of the Hoover and Curtis positions is to be expected. Their own candidates are pledged to repeal both personally and by platform.

To complicate the vexed picture of the place prohibition will have in the election, Bishop James Cannon, Jr., contributed from Switzerland, where he is traveling, his wanted statement as to the Hoover prohibition views. He charged the President had "surrendered" on prohibition enforcement.

Like the convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in Seattle, which predicted the rise of a new party, the bishop saw only in the congressional elections a place for advocates of federal prohibition.

G. O. P. DRIVE IN MAINE

Speaker Garner, aside from his reiterated assertion of party loyalty in 1928, sought to refute during his New York visit the charge of radicalism voiced in the Democratic spokesmen. It was promptly reiterated from the newly established Republican general headquarters in New York City.

More than that, Republican plans to launch Secretary Hyde and Hurley into the Maine State campaign which terminates September 12, was disclosed, to be the first real test of the election.

On the Democratic side plans for a Roosevelt 21-state swing through middle, north and southwest and the Pacific coast in September were announced. Before that, however, what the Democratic candidate will say in his speech tomorrow afternoon in Columbus, O., in answer to President Roosevelt, was the next major scheduled event of the campaign.

With that speech, the Democratic presidential drive will be fully launched. President Hoover's personal campaign plans are yet to be disclosed in detail.

Flier's Wife Cries 'How Wonderful!'

London, Aug. 19 (INS)—"How wonderful—I knew he would do it," cried Mrs. James Mollison today when informed that a plane believed to be that of her flying husband had been sighted over Halifax, N. S.

Mrs. Mollison, the former Amy Johnson, famous aviatrix, arrived at Stag Lane this afternoon to take her mind off her husband's hazardous venture by "doing crazy stunts."

WOMEN FLIERS NEAR RECORD

Curtiss Field, New York, Aug. 19 (AP)—Mrs. Frances Marsalis and Mrs. Louise Thaden approached a new endurance record for women in their "flying boudoir" today and indicated they would go right on flying for several days.

At 8 a. m. today they had been in the air 114 hours. The record is 122 hours and if they remain up until 4 p. m., they will have equaled it.

To set an official new record they must surpass the old one by at least an hour.

The pair was clearing today after hours of fog and intermittent rain.

DAVIS TO APPEAR IN COURT AUG. 30

New York, Aug. 19 (AP)—Senator James J. Davis of Pennsylvania notified the United States attorney's office through a lawyer today that he would appear August 30 to plead to indictments returned yesterday charging him and six others with participation in a lottery.

Senator Davis will attend the national convention of the Loyal Order of Moose next week and will be here throughout the following week.

The indictments had to do with alleged lotteries conducted in connection with benevolent activities of the Moose and other fraternal organizations.

The Western Union Telegraph company, which was also indicted, will enter its plea next Wednesday as will M. J. Rivise of the telegraph company. Raymond Walsh and Bernard C. McGuire, a former Lowell, Mass., man.

The remaining defendants, Conrad Mann, Theodore Miller and Frank Herring have not yet been heard from at the federal building.

Banks Get $736,000,000 and Railroads $230,000,000, the U. S. Treasury Head Reveals Providence, R. I., Aug. 19—The Reconstruction Finance Corp. lent $1,219,000,000 to 4947 institutions including 4190 banks and trust companies from Feb. 2 to July 31.

Secretary Mills made the figures public today in an address at commencement exercises of Bryant-Stratton College of Business Administration here.

He denied the corporation had helped only the great city banks and other large institutions, and described the efforts to revive business.

346 CLOSED BANKS AIDED

Mills said the corporation had advanced $736,000,000 to the banks and trust companies. Of that sum $30,000,000 went to aid in the reorganization or liquidation of 346 closed banks.

He added that $68,000,000 was loaned to 541 building and loan associations, $67,000,000 to 73 insurance companies, $81,000,000 to 60 mortgage loan companies, $767,000 to 10 agricultural credit corporations, $80,000,000 to 14 livestock credit corporations, nearly a million and a half to five joint stock land banks, $26,000,000 to eight federal land banks, $405,000 to three credit unions and $230,000,000 to 43 railroads and receivers.

"Of the $1,219,000,000 authorized," Mills said, "$576,000,000 had actually been disbursed on July 30, of which $110,000,000 had been repaid.

LOANS TO FARMERS

"In addition to the above, 500,000 individual loans to farmers, aggregating $65,000,000, have been made by the Secretary of Agriculture out of the $97,000,000 thus far allocated to him.

"It has been said that the Reconstruction Finance Corp. benefits only the great city banks and other large institutions. The contrary is true. The great majority of banks which have borrowed from the corporation are located in small towns.

"Specifically on July 30, 76 per cent of the banks to which loans had been authorized were in towns of less than 5000 population; 88 per cent were in towns of less than 25,000 population and 90 per cent were in towns of less than 50,000.

"Looking at it from another angle, we find that loans have been authorized to more than 30 per cent of all the banks in the country, these banks having about 13,000,000 of the 46,000,000 bank depositors in the United States.

"STOPS FIRE SPREADING"

"These 15,000,000 have been directly affected by the corporation's loans to banks while the other 25,000,000 have benefited indirectly by the corporation's activities in preventing the fire from spreading."

Mills said the corporation's activities had tended more and more to restore confidence in financial institutions and that the shrinkage in bank deposits and bank credits which had been "proceeding at a disastrous rate for months has been partially checked."

"Men may not look to the immediate economic future with complete assurance," Mills said, "but today the ark at least floats. It is unafraid. Our ship has come through a financial hurricane with much suffering, some broken spars, torn sails and wreckage on deck, but the hull is sound and neither crew nor passengers doubt that we shall come safely to port."

POWER ESCORT OF FIREMEN

Henry J. Power, assistant fire chief who died suddenly yesterday, will be buried tomorrow with a last tribute from the department of which he was a member for more than 32 years.

The funeral will be held from the home, 58 Fairmount st., Dorchester, with a solemn high mass at St. Gregory's Church in Dorchester ave. A detail of honor made up of members of the fire department will organize at the quarters of Engine 46, Peabody st., in charge of District Chief Charles A. Cunningham and Lieut. John J. Crehan, adjutant. All officers and privates off duty will attend.

$50,000 in Furniture of Gloria Swanson Attached

Beverly Hills, Cal., Aug. 19—Deputy sheriffs from Los Angeles slapped a writ of attachment on nearly $50,000 worth of furniture in the mansion of Gloria Swanson, film star.

And unless somebody puts up a $28,000 bond this morning the same deputies will begin moving the furniture to a warehouse.

The writ was obtained when W. J. Saylor, Ltd., furniture dealer, filed suit against the actress, who is now in England with her fourth husband, Michael Farmer.

LAUD EXPOSE OF AID FRAUDS

Publicity given welfare frauds, especially the recitation of disclosures of the Boston Evening American, that led to the present official investigation, has already saved Greater Boston cities and towns thousands of dollars by driving the dole frauds to cover, Lynn welfare officials said today.

Joseph Cole, executive secretary of the Lynn welfare department, when asked about the situation in that city, said:

"Reports from our investigation reveal that those who were receiving aid dishonestly have been frightened by publicity exposing them in the past few weeks, particularly the campaign conducted by the Boston American."

James J. Ray, head of the Lynn department, asserted:

"I think the Boston American is doing great work in exposing welfare frauds. The wide publicity given such cases has tended to discourage others from attempting to get money and food to which they are not entitled.

"If all newspapers took the same interest and displayed the same courage as the Boston American, all such frauds would be entirely eliminated."

FEARS U. S. HAS NONE THAT LAW MADE SOBER

Have you a little reformed drunkard in your home?

Or a big one?

Not one reformed by religion. Nor by illness. Nor by moral pursuasion. Nor by "the wife."

But one reformed by prohibition —one who was a grand old guzzling gutter souse in the days 'ere Volstead and who has since become as sober as a judge ("What judge?" "Who said that?") because the Eighteenth Amendment and Andrew Volstead said he couldn't drink.

WHAT, NO SOT SAVED?

If you have such a one, hail and hallelujah! Array him in his little spic and span Buster Brown suit and bring him forth by the hand into the light of Diogenes' lantern and end the search which, starting June 1 in New York, which has twice crossed the continent and which is centered in Boston today.

MORE SOUSES NOW

The searchers, who arrived at the Copley-Plaza last night in their Diogenes placarded truck with its big lantern, drew a deep breath of new hope this morning and began their two-day quest in Boston.

Their start wasn't very auspicious, for very encouraging. With Arthur L. Race, of the Copley-Plaza, they visited the mayor. The mayor gave them pictures of himself and of George Washington, but he couldn't produce a picture of anybody who'd been saved by Volstead. In fact, he told them, they'd find that most of the heavy drinkers of today never drank before prohibition. The searchers were aghast.

Dr. Robert Nicholson of Catholic University, assistant director of the research committee, then communicated by telephone with Dr. A. Z. Conrad of Park st. Church, one of Boston's dryest drys.

CONRAD WON'T TELL

Dr. Conrad regretted that he couldn't give a personal interview because of a funeral and a New York trip, but he said he knew of a dozen men who used to pummel their wives before prohibition and didn't do it now because of prohibition. He couldn't give their names, he said, because they were quite ashamed of their past.

"I am not sanguine," said Paul Morris, director of the research committee of four college students. "We've been westward across the nation, down the Pacific coast and back through the south and we have found nary a one to claim the honor.

"We saw Mr. Volstead out in St. Paul. We couldn't pronce any beneficiary of his legal off-spring. We thought we were taking an unfair advantage of the drys and said that if he did produce three

SHE'S WIFE NO. 2

Mrs. Mildred J. Kennedy Potter, whose tip to police revealed today that Arthur W. Potter had acquired wife No. 3. She said Potter wed her in 1930 and deserted her shortly afterward.

THOUGHT SHE WAS ONLY ONE

Mrs. Aura mae Jeffrian Potter, who is Wife No. 3 in Potter's tangled matrimonial affairs. She was married to him in Nashua, N. H., in 1929, and was with him in the apartment today when police swooped down and arrested him. (Staff photos.)

WIVES RAIN DOWN AFTER HIS ARREST

Arthur W. Potter of Belvidere st. in custody of Special Officer John Geoghan after his arrest today in the apartment where he was living with Wife No. 3, having deserted Nos. 1 and 2, according to police charges.

FORMER SPOUSE RESPONSIBLE FOR ARREST

Trails Man She Says Deserted Her, and Then Comes the News of Wife No. 1

A daybreak raid in a Belvidere st., Back Bay, apartment, resulted today in the arrest of Arthur W. Potter, 25, on suspicion of bigamy—and wives began to rain down upon him.

Police had accused him of having two wives, and believing they were summoning in just one extra wife, sent for the former Mildred J. Kennedy, 22, a telegraph operator employed in New York.

When the operator arrived it was disclosed that instead of being just plain Mrs. Potter No. 2, she was Mrs. Potter No. 2 with a third wife still to be interviewed.

Potter admitted calmly that police were short in their accusations by at least a wife, and when he admitted it, the pretty girl broke down and cried.

In municipal court, with his second wife as the chief witness against him, Potter was sentenced to a year in the House of Correction, and accepted it. He first pleaded not guilty but as his second wife, who was responsible for the raid, took the stand, he changed his plea voluntarily to guilty.

ADMITS 3 WEDDINGS

Potter admitted that he has been married three times, according to police but denied that there were a fourth or fifth in the offing.

The second wife, who lives in New York, told police she met Potter in April, 1929 in Manhattan and was told her that he had an uncle who was a duke in Ireland and that in his ancestral background imperial shadows mated even as far back as among the ancient kings of Ireland.

She and Potter eloped to Greenwich, Ct., on March 24, 1930, when she was unaware of any previous marital affiliation on his part. She said she also did not know he had been married a third time.

The raid on Potter's apartment furnished a tearful surprise for Mrs. Ann Jeffrian Potter, 21, the alleged third wife, who lives there with him, according to police. Later in the day police anticipated a tableau when the first wife, Mrs. Cecilia Wilkinson Potter, a New York nurse, now living in Harrison ave., South End, would appear.

Following the raid, both Potter and the alleged third wife were held at headquarters

WIFE IS RELEASED

There, after Potter had produced a marriage certificate to prove he and the girl were wed in an elopement in Nashua, N. H., in 1929, Mrs. Potter was released but her husband was held to face his other wives.

He claims to have obtained a divorce somewhere in New Jersey before his second marriage, but the New York nurse says there was no divorce and that she has been seeking him since.

They were wed in Staten Island in March, 1925, and he left her a year later, she says, Potter said. Recently she saw him in Washington st. and followed him to Belvidere st., engaging a room of the third Mrs. Potter and went to the police.

The second wife testified that Potter married her in March, 1930, and deserted her the following July although he knew she was about to become a mother.

SHELL TRAIL HIM

He came to Jamaica Plain from New York, she said, to attend the funeral of his mother, and while here married the third wife. Then he went back to New York to live with wife No. 2 for three weeks. The baby, a boy, is now nearly two years old, she testified.

After the case had been disposed of she said to the probation officer:

"I am going to stay in Boston awhile. I believe there are other things in his life that should come to the attention of the police and if it is possible for me to learn of them, I will bring them to their attention.

"A year in jail is not enough for his type of man."

ARREST THREAT IN KIDNAPING

Lawrence, Aug. 19—Police Capt. Michael A. Barry announced today that John Hall, 10, kidnaped son of Mr. and Mrs. George Hall of Concord st., would be put on a train in Washington, D. C., today to come home in care of the Travelers' Aid Society.

Barry said this is the information sent him by Atty. Robert W. McCullough of Washington who represents the family of the mental defective who took the boy away.

If the boy is not started home today, for whatever reason, Barry will ask for a warrant charging kidnaping and will go through with prosecution, he said. McCullough first asked for a week's delay so the Maryland family could drive back with the boy.

BOXER HELD IN "DRY" ATTACK

Walter Rozen, 23-year-old Brockton boxer, weighing 217 pounds, was arrested early today in Montello as one of three men who "beat up" two prohibition agents outside a Brockton drugstore Wednesday night.

The dry agents had gone to the drug store to notify a pretty girl clerk to appear in federal court in Boston as an alleged liquor seller, although it was admitted today by Maj. Henry E. Goodenough, assistant prohibition administrator, that no complaint has been made against her.

The boxer was arrested on a description furnished by the two dry agents, John Ferry, 28, of Charles st., Roslindale, and Daniel Gray, 36, of Thatcher st., Milton, the description being recognized by Chief Inspector George C. Chase of Brockton as one fitting Rozen.

In District Court the fighter was held in $2000 bail for a hearing Aug. 31 on two counts of assault and battery on the dry agents.

At Brockton Hospital, where Ferry and Gray are still under treatment as a result of the beating, it was said that they may be discharged in a few days.

At that time, according to Maj. Goodenough, a complaint will be sworn out against the pretty girl clerk.

Talk With Detective Saves Westfield Man $12,000

Westfield, Aug. 19—Frank W. Stine of 110 Court st., sales manager for a local automobile agency, talked with a detective in Chicago —and he had saved his $12,000 today, according to dispatches from that city.

Stine and his wife recently returned to Westfield after touring in California and along the west coast, and Stine drew $12,000 from the bank and went to Chicago.

There, according to the despatches, he became suspicious of a "business deal" in which he had started negotiations while on his way and went to Detective-Lieut. John McGinnis.

"I've been touring in California with my wife," Stine told the detective, "and two weeks ago I met two men there who induced me to join them in a race pool.

"I put up no money but in a few days the three of us had won $120,000."

The automobile man explained, however, that the bookmaker made it a condition that the players on the races show that they could have paid if they had lost. Stine came back to Westfield to draw out $12,000 as his part of the proof.

Detective McGinnis patted Stine on the back after hearing the story.

"You've saved yourself from one of the oldest skin games in the world," said the detective. "I've heard the same story a hundred times, but only after the victim had lost his shirt."

New Altitude Record by French Aviatrix

Villa Coublay, France, Aug. 19 (AP)—A new women's altitude record was claimed today for Maryse Hilz, whose barograph showed a reading of 10,200 meters. The instruments were turned over to authorities for checking.

This mark would be better than that of 8357 meters established by Miss Elinor Smith, the American aviatrix, in 1930.

Woods Hole, Aug. 19—Two unidentified fishermen in a dory after drifting helplessly for nearly two miles in the teeth of the wind, managed to reach the Pollock Rip lightship and were taken aboard.

TEXAS OPPOSES FREIGHT RATES

Washington, Aug. 19 (AP)—Texas reasons today registered objections to reduction of carload freight rates on cotton from southwestern points to New England and New Orleans.

F. H. Dalzell, traffic manager of the Houston cotton exchange, told the Interstate Commerce Commission at its conference on proposed rates, freight rates that the Texas ports fear the rates were unfair to shippers in the various seaports.

Dalzell's particular objection was that NO rates are quoted from Texas points to Houston. He also said he believed the rates would be detrimental to cotton merchants operating throughout the Houston territory.

Railroads throughout the south have filed tariffs with the commission reducing rates on cotton in carloads to New England, Canada and New Orleans, establishing for the first time a definite carload rate on cotton. The move was made in an effort to meet motor truck and barge line competition.

Schooner Wrecked, 6 Jump to Safety

Madison, Conn., Aug. 19 (AP)—The 88-foot auxiliary schooner Belle, owned by John Doane of New York and East River, Conn., was wrecked on Hammonnasset Beach today after its six occupants jumped overboard and waded ashore. The schooner went ashore at Meig's Point and was pounded to pieces.

AVIATRIX FACES DEPORTATION

Miami, Fla., Aug. 19 (INS)—Deportation hearing against Mrs. Jessie M. Keith-Miller, Australian aviatrix and a principal figure in the trial of Capt. W. N. Lancaster, British flyer, for the murder of her fiance, Hayden Clarke, will be held behind closed doors Monday.

The aviatrix is free under $1000 bond on a Labor Department warrant charging that by her own admission she is suffering from an ailment which bars entry to this country.

A Federal immigration warrant for the deportation of Lancaster, acquitted of the Clarke murder, also has been issued but has not been served.

Action on the warrant against the flyer has been "indefinitely postponed," according to Federal authorities.

Strawn Likes Hoover Stand on Dry Law

Chicago, Aug. 19 (AP)—Re-election of President Hoover on his record and specifically because of his prohibition stand was urged today by Silas H. Strawn, chairman of the Illinois State finance committee of the Republican national committee and former chairman of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Strawn outlined the pre-presidential career of President Hoover as proof of his fitness.

STREET FLOODS STALL TRAFFIC

Flooded streets stalled traffic in many sections of Greater Boston today in a downpour that was recorded at nearly two inches of rain in 12 hours.

Coupled with temperature readings in the 70's, the rain caused a heavy humidity that was not aided much by a weak wind from the southwest.

One of the larger floods was at Harper st., and Eastern ave., Chelsea. The rain formed a veritable pond there, to the despair of motorists who risked wet ignitions trying to drive through.

Columbia rd., at the foot of Hamilton st., Dorchester, saw its usual flood, and many other sections of Roxbury, Dorchester and Chelsea were affected.

The regular airplane from New York was forced to fly low over the city and caused one excited resident of Roxbury to report the plane in danger.

The weather will clear but skies will remain cloudy tonight, the weather man predicted. Tomorrow will be cool and partly cloudy, he added.

Wasserman Quits Race for Congress

Atty. Jacob Wasserman of Newton withdrew today from the Republican contest for Congress in the ninth district, leaving two candidates against Robert W. Luce, who voted against the recent measure to modify prohibition laws. The time limit for withdrawals was set at 5 p. m. today.

Wasserman's withdrawal, made for business reasons, leaves Ralph W. Robart of Cambridge and William H. Murphy of Brookline opposed.

New York, Aug. 19 (AP)—The National Credit Corp., formed last dutumn to assist in advancing money to needy banks, announced today that on Aug. 29, it would make another payment of 15 per cent to subscribers who furnished the money for its operation.

This makes the seventh repayment in the corporation's work of winding up its financial affairs. Repayments no wamount to about 75 per cent.

Attleboro Tax Up $3

Attleboro, Aug. 19 (AP)—Attleboro's 1932 tax rate was announced as $38.90 per $1000, today, an increase of $3 over last year and 90 cents more than double the rate in 1917.

GANG ARRESTED LEAVING COURT

New York, Aug. 19 (INS)—The 14 men held by police for the murder of John Bazzano, Pittsburgh racketer, were released today by Judge George H. Folwell in Brooklyn homicide court when Asst. Atty. Nicholas Paski failed to present evidence against them conclusive enough to warrant their further detention.

Because of the prominence given the case and because of a large crowd which had collected outside of the court Judge Folwell suggested that the prisoners be allowed to leave by a back door.

This was done but the freed defendants found to their surprise that a group of detectives was waiting for them to rearrest him of them on the general charges of disorderly conduct and being public enemies.

SHORTER WORK WEEK FAVORED BY LEGION

Indianapolis, Aug. 19 (AP)—A shorter of "flexible" working week is overwhelmingly favored by American Legion posts as a means of spreading work and increasing employment, incomplete returns of a poll of Legion posts showed today.

Henry L. Stevens, Jr., national commander, announced that the first replies from the 10,600 posts showed a ratio of almost 7 to 1 favoring the proposal. He said 789 voted for the shorter week and 122 against it.

"Sentiment for the "flexible week," Stevens reported, "is not confined to any section or locality, and the farming districts are in favor of it as strongly as the industrial centers. Sentiment in the big cities is overwhelmingly in favor of it."

The Legion has joined with the American Federation of Labor in sponsoring the shorter workday to combat unemployment.

Commander Stevens cited federation statistics which he said "show that if the shorter working week were to be universally adopted today the more than 11,000,000 jobless would be nearly absorbed in the ranks of wage-earners."

Spain Orders Land of Rebels Seized

Madrid, Aug. 19 (US)—The decree signed by President Alcala Zamora, ordering confiscation without indemnity of landed property belonging to persons implicated in the Monarchist rebellion of last week, was passed last night by the Cortes. The vote was 216 to 14.

As confiscation will take about six months before being completed, present holders of land affected are ordered to continue cultivation, paying the proceeds to the government.

Woman Survivor of Oldest Married Couple Dies, 101

Columbus, Ga., Aug. 19 (AP)—Mrs. Mary Ann Blood Blackmar, 101-year-old survivor of the two who once were credited with being the oldest living married couple in the United States, died here after a short illness.

Her husband, Alfred Owen Blackmar, 2d, died in April, 1930, six weeks before his 100th birthday. The couple observed their 78th wedding anniversary the preceding November and through a survey conducted by Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Armand of Kansas City, were found to be the country's oldest married pair.

Mrs. Blackmar was born April 26, 1831, in Charlton, Mass., and was married in 1851 when she came South to visit kinsmen.

LINDY'S BABY BORN IN N. Y.

New York, Aug. 19—The second son of Colonel and Anne Morrow Lindbergh was not born in the Morrow mansion at Englewood, but at 4 East 66th st., Manhattan, the birth certificate filed with the department of health today disclosed.

The Lindberghs were at the Morrow home in Englewood until Monday night.

At 3 a. m. Tuesday, Mrs. Lindbergh was placed in a car and taken to the penthouse apartment in New York. The baby was born four and a half hours later.

The certificate listed the baby simply as "Baby Lindbergh."

College Will Give Jobless Students a Free Course

St. Louis, Aug. 19 (AP)—Washington University will open the door of opportunity to the jobless this fall.

Free courses will be offered in law, engineering, business administration, the liberal arts and science, the graduate school, it was announced today.

While some other universities have offered free courses to the unemployed, officials of the university said no other school had offered such a broad range of subjects.

Applicants need only prove that they are unemployed, lack funds for tuition and are qualified for at least junior year work.

IRISHMEN RUSH TO JOIN GUARDS

Dublin, Irish Free State, Aug. 18 (AP)—The rush to join the "White" volunteers, whose announced purpose is to preserve law and order, proved so great today the Dublin staff was unable to deal with applicants.

In every county rapid organization was reported and it is anticipated there will be large parades Sunday, anniversary of the death of Michael Collins, chief of the provisional government of the Irish Free State, who was killed in ambush in 1922.

Peace moves in the Anglo-Irish tariff war appeared imminent today, although the Free State was intensifying its economic counter-attack. Interest among farmers hit by British duties was increasing, however, as their funds became exhausted and their credit was stretched to the limit.

WELFARE PROBERS IN CLASH

crowd of 400 demanding that they be heard on relief.

WALTHAM—Announcement of meeting of aid receivers next Tuesday at which Mayor Doane will inform them they must take drastic cuts in their amounts.

MALDEN—Discussion by city and court officials of action to be taken in frauds. Charges by welfare officials that Mayor Hastings had agreed with the establishment of a flat date of $1.07 per person weekly and had wished to make it less.

Injection of the law department into the Boston situation made four departments—City Council, welfare department, police and the city's law forces—all at odds over the startling disclosures of widespread fraud.

SAYS COUNCIL FEARS

City council members, moreover, are warring with one another over the scheduling and cancelling of a probe by the council's committee on welfare.

This tempest promised to have far-reaching results. All city hall was discussing the situation today.

The general opinion was that the majority of the council did not dare to hold an investigation, and Councillor David M. Brackman, taking cognizance of this, said:

"At the regular meeting next Monday I will demand an investigation of the welfare department. If we back down now, the public will get the impression we fear disclosures of our own inquiry. We've got to correct that impression.

It was freely predicted that the council would reject Brackman's motion, if he makes it.

WANT NO WHITEWASH

Councillor Joseph McGrath, chairman of the committee on welfare, when asked for his explanation of the reversal of plans said:

"We decided that an investigation by us might be regarded by the public as an effort to whitewash ourselves, inasmuch as we have been accused of using our influence to get people on the welfare list."

"ACTIONS NOT WORDS"

Corporation Counsel Silverman said:

"As I understand it, the police commissioner is going right ahead and doing the thing himself. Therefore, there's no occasion for friction. The commissioner hasn't consulted with us at all.

"We are going ahead in our own way, conducting our own investigation. The law department is going to make its arrests of high police officers attached to the welfare department.

"We are going ahead in the regular way—and getting results. We get our initial information from the welfare department. Then we investigate and act. We are not talking, we are acting."

"We have already received substantial sums of money, totaling between $20,000 and $25,000, by attachments of bank accounts. We have six such accounts under attachment now, and will seek warrants just as soon as we can determine that we have the right parties.

"Recently the police revealed a conspiracy in which two welfare men received fees of $1 a week fro mrecipients of aid for checking them off falsely as having worked.

"POLICE TOOK CREDIT"

"As a matter of fact, we had that case two weeks ago and had made the arrests before the police knew about it. It was an old story, and yet the police took the credit for it.

"Then the police had a story of a man who had money in the bank. When they revealed that story, we had already attached his bank account and recovered the money he had received from the welfare department—and had the man under arrest.

"However, the police are doing a lot of good in frightening off unworthy cases. The law department and the police department are not at odds, but we are not working together because they haven't asked us. We would be glad to help out if requested, but we won't offer any assistance. I believe it would avoid a lot of petition if the two departments worked together.

"Then, too, there are certain cases which appear to be on the border line of fraud, which might not be, and in which the police might do serious injustice.

"We would be glad to co-operate with the police. We are going ahead on our investigation. But we are getting results. That's the difference. We are getting money back. We didn't want to make political capital out of these cases.

"As it stands now, the police give the impression that many entitled to aid are dishonest. Now the finger of suspicion is pointed at everyday on the welfare list."

SUBTERFUGE FOR SALE

Boston police have discovered a number of cases where property-owners have transferred title to relatives so that they could get on the welfare list. One woman transferred ownership of a two-family house to a cousin and obtained an allowance of $14 a week from the city.

Numerous cases are reported of police meeting an arrogant attitude on the part of people on the list. When one woman with several children, but with other income, was asked why she collected public aid, she replied:

"Well, if I don't get it I'll take my whole family and camp right on the steps of the police station until I do get it!"

HERO SOUGHT NO AID

On the other hand, police were directed by a neighbor to the home of a gassed war veteran who had not applied for aid. The officers found him in a flat almost bare of furniture. The only food in the house was boiled rice and there was no milk or sugar. The family consists of the veteran, his wife and a child, 14.

He said he had not applied for soldiers' relief or welfare aid because he had been informed by friends that in that case his child would be taken away from him. He chose to keep his child and hope for a job. Police have seen to it that his name is now on the welfare list.

A former attache of the welfare department said:

"I know of a bunch of young loafers, some of whom have been receiving aid for several years. They sleep in the parks when they're on jags and 30 of them were rounded up one Saturday night. Ten were on the welfare list. In some cases their mothers go out to work scrubbing floors, but the young fellows prefer to live on public charity. They wouldn't think of trying to get jobs."

Dorchester police reported seven persons did not live at addresses stated by the welfare board, thus adding to the long list of such cases.

GET DOLES AND JOBS

Most of the Watertown frauds concern persons who obtained jobs after being placed on the town relief rolls, they continued to collect welfare money.

All have been dropped, and in a few cases, where the amounts received totaled $200 or more, restitution has been demanded. No replies have yet been received, and Welfare Director Murphy feels it may be necessary to arrest these persons. Several other men have already been successfully prosecuted.

William Fitzgerald, spokesman for the Somerville welfare department, was refused to give a Boston Evening American reporter an explanation Wednesday of a missent check asked the Boston Evening American today to print his explanation. He explained as follows:

"The check which was received by Frank Carterino of Boston st. was made out to Frank Caterino of 397 Somerville ave. and was for grocery orders filled by him. It was incorrectly addressed by the auditor's department to 397 Somerville ave. There being no Carterino at that address, the postoffice sent it to Carterino on Boston st."

$7200 IN BANK

Fitzgerald indicated that he thought Carterino and everyone else interested in the matter should have known the full explanation without anybody in the welfare department answering any questions.

The artifices practiced by some of the fakers who are constantly duping the welfare department would be envied by stage folk. There was a case brought to light today of an elderly foreigner who claimed he was caring for eight grandchildren and found it difficult to support himself.

An inexperienced and emotional young woman was sent to investigate. She climbed three flights to a dark tenement. The old man kissed her hand in gratitude for her visit. He was surrounded by eight children whom the aid were his grandchildren. He told a story so pitiful that it brought tears to the girl visitor's eyes.

She was profuse in her report recommending aid. A few weeks after her visit a patrolman won had directed her to the address told her that he had seen the same old man visit a bank in the neighborhood and deposit $58.

Further investigation revealed that he had bank deposits totaling $7700, that he owned real estate and that he had rounded up the children of neighbors to pose as his "grandchildren," while awaiting the arrival of the welfare visitor.

BANK DEPOSIT SHIFTED

It was revealed today, however, that in one case investigated the aid recipient had transferred $1800 from Boston to a Worcester bank. Another instance was that of a person who had withdrawn $4900 from a bank in April, 1931, and had then been placed on the city aid list.

The city law department also found another case, that of a woman who looks to the city for support although she has $4400 in the bank. In this case the money was deposited by her husband before he left for India with the stipulation she could not withdraw it until his death. She is thus without support.

Chairman Simon E. Hecht, of the Welfare board, declared last night there had been a slight decrease in the number of persons applying for aid since the police probe was opened.

In Everett last night a crowd of about 400, aid recipients, stormed City Hall, where the Common Council was meeting to pass a $150,000 poor relief appropriation.

After passage, Councilor Joseph Rocco addressed the council and expressed the opinion some of the persons present should be heard. Councilor Virgil W. Tobey agreed, but said he believed David Dudley, head of the welfare board should be present so that both sides of the question could be heard.

POLICE CALLED

His statement was greeted with a volley of hoos and hisses and the demonstration began to grow so violent that police were called. When the group was quieted the order allowing them to speak was passed.

In Malden some doubt has arisen whether it would be advisable to prosecute all those found defrauding the city.

At a meeting of city and court officials last night it was pointed out that if a larceny charge were brought against a man who obtained work and continued to draw welfare relief, a conviction would remove all support from the family and make them a certain burden.

Civil action to recover the money would probably cost the recipient his job, also bringing him back to the relief rolls, it was pointed out.

John B. Marshall and his wife, Ruth, of Franklin st., Cambridge, pleaded not guilty in East Cambridge District Court today to larceny, and the case was continued to August 24. Police say that when they applied for aid, Mrs. Marshall had a bank balance of $1048, and that the couple now own a third interest in two Cambridge houses.

Brantley, Ala., Aug. 19—Three passenger coaches and two other cars of a southbound Central of Georgia passenger train plunged over a high embankment three miles north of here, yesterday, causing injuries to a score or more persons, six of whom here hurt seriously.

Reading Cuts Pay of Needy Workers

Reading board of public welfare announces today a cut in the rate of pay which will be made to those working under the direction of the board in special work provided for them. Heretofore the rate of pay has been 40 cents an hour, but a cut of 25 per cent in this rate is now to be made, bringing it to 30 cents an hour.

Couple Questioned in "Spot" Slaying

Gloucester, Aug. 19 — For the second time in two days police and State Detective Joseph Ferraro questioned Mr. and Mrs. Emil Forland of Ivy court in connection with the "spot" murder at Andover on August 1 of Frank D'Arrigo, former tango dancer and so-called West End, Boston, "gigolo."

Police questioned the Forlands on the theory that they might be able to establish whether anyone was known to be jealous of D'Arrigo, whose body was found last week.

10,000 MINERS JOIN STRIKE IN ILLINOIS

Taylorville, Ill., Aug. 19 (AP)—Ten thousand or more striking union coal miners stopped all mining operations in this area today and leaders announced they planned to spread over southern Illinois and continue their campaign.

More than 2000 miners protesting a reduced wage scale picketed Peabody Coal Co. mines near Taylorville. Only a few employes appeared for work and they turned away without attempting to enter the mines.

Illinois National Guardsmen were held in readiness to move into the picketing zone, but there were few reports of violence. Fifteen hundred special deputy sheriffs did not interfere with the strikers' movements. State police were directing traffic on congested highways.

W. C. August, superintendent of Peabody mines in the Taylorville area, said no attempt would be made to open the mines "until conditions are changed."

He charged that strikers attacked and beat a guard and another employe this morning as they reported for work at a mine near Kincaid, and took a gun from the guard. He also said a house on Peabody property near here where the miners camped last night had been dynamited and two others burned.

'Erbie and 'Is Playmates

-:- STRADDLE, THAT'S THE WORD

'Erbie and his little companions are playing soldiers. 'Erbie is getting them used to sleeping out of doors to toughen them. Will those brave lads fall in the coming fray? Looks like it, but they have all got their identification tags on. 'Erbie's Dry playmate and his Wet playmate are giving the countersign. They got it out of 'Erbies acceptance speech. Ropy is mounting guard. War and cancellation of debts are Ropy's favorite outdoor sports. Yes, a soldier's life is strenuous. It all comes down to the old, familiar question—"Would you rather be a major with an eagle on your shoulder, or a private with a chicken on your knee?" However, as we have before remarked—

Heat Causes 50 Deaths in Europe

Paris, Aug. 19 (INS)—Between 40 and 50 deaths from prostration, drowning, and automobile accidents were directly attributed today to the almost unprecedented heat wave which has held France in its grip for a week.

It was estimated that approximately 4,000,000 square miles of European territory was suffering from the high temperature and no sign of relief was in sight.

CHILDREN DIE IN FLAMING CAR

Island, Mich., Aug. 19 (INS)—Six small children were burned to death here today when an automobile exploded and burned after a collision.

Her parents and an uncle, riding with them in an antiquated car, were critically burned.

The dead were Edward Messer, 5, his brother, Forest, 10, and his sister, Mary, 4, and Stella, 6.

Leaping motorist pulled George Messer, 42, his wife, Mary, 38, and brother, Harry Crain, from the burning automobile. At a Bay City hospital it was feared all would die.

South Boston Men Accused in Theft

Two South Boston men were held in $1,000 bail at Milk st. station early today on suspicion of connection with the theft of an auto in South Boston and theft of a vending machine from a Congress st. gasoline station, that was thrown into Fort Point channel.

The men held are Joseph Jagey, 22, of Gold st., and John F. Kassel, 23, of Gold st.

"Jane Addams was quite sure that she could bring forth at least one who had been saved, but she didn't.

"Down in Washington, Acting Prohibition Director F. F. Stafford said no law in this or any other country would stop a man from drinking if he wanted to drink. Here again, we found no ground for argument.

"Ah, me," he sighed deeply. "We have come some 13,000 miles and all we've run into are phonies. Some woman telephoned and says she knows just where we go to see him and find it's her estranged sweetheart. They've had a little quarrel and she's getting even.

The assistant Diogenesse, J. Ward Ryan of Harvard, Ernest W. Borkland, Jr., of University of Pennsylvania, Russell G. Salmon of Rensselaer Polytech and Robert Nicholson of Catholic University, gathered up their little lanterns and followed him.

"And what will you do with this fellow if you find him?" they were asked.

"Do with him? Why, say, we'll take him to Washington and dine him and wine him—no, just dine him—and shake his hand and say, 'Boy, congratulations.' The one man out of 125,000,000 who has been saved by prohibition and the expenditure of umpty billion dollars. And we'll have Bergium do a statute of him for posterity."

PICCARD'S NEXT SKY HOP TO BE IN CANADA

Dessenzano, Italy, Aug. 19 (AP)—Prof. Auguste Piccard reated today after his record-breaking ascent into the stratosphere yesterday and announced he would begin immediately to prepare for a third ascent from the northwest shore of Hudson Bay, Canada.

"The moment we finish the work of calculating the results recorded by our instruments on yesterday's flight," he said, "we will begin preparations for the third experiment.

"We plan to take off from the northwest shore of Hudson Bay, as close as we can get to the North Pole. Our purpose will be to complete the study of cosmic rays at a point where the lines of magnetic force penetrate the stratosphere.

"A solution for many scientific problems will be provided when we know how the rays act under these conditions."

The third expedition, Piccard said, will not begin until the middle of next summer.

His next scientific move, he said, would be to take the instruments he carried with him yesterday to a height of more than 10 miles above the earth, to Zurich, Switzerland, the starting point of his flight, to have the seals removed and the results verified.

CHILDREN FIGHT WIDOW'S WILL

New Haven, Conn., Aug. 19 (AP)—Mrs. Nicholas Hubinger's five children, court records disclosed today, are left NO share of her $750,000 estate, the bulk of which she willed to Matthew A. Daly, her late husband's real estate manager.

Date for a probate court hearing on admission of the will, drawn in 1924, by the widow of the starch manufacturer, has NOT been set. Negotiations were reported under way between the children and Daly seeking to a compromise to avoid a court contest.

The children are Jane Hubinger Clark of Los Angeles and Lillian Hubinger, Mary Hubinger Higgins, Nicholas Hubinger and Frederick E. Hubinger, all of New Haven.

Daly acted as a business agent for Mrs. Hubinger for some time after the death of her husband, whose estate was estimated at $2,000,000. That is to be distributed among the children now, in accordance with Hubinger's will.

BOXER HELD IN BEATING DRYS

Brockton, Aug. 19—Walter Rozen, 19-year-old, 217-pound pugilist, was arrested in a Montello pool room early today, charged with Wednesday night's assault on two dry agents from Boston.

Police said he was identified by the assault by John Perry, 39, of Thorne st., Roslindale, and Daniel Gray, 36, of Thatcher st., Milton. He refused to name two companions, they said.

In district court, Rozen pleaded not guilty and was held in $2000 for hearing Aug. 31.

Rozen was arrested after Police Inspector George C. Chase named him from the description given by the assault victims.

Perry and Gray had gone to a drug store in Ames st. to notify a girl clerk to appear in federal court and were attacked as they left the store.

Samuel T. Bodine Dies in Philadelphia

Philadelphia, Aug. 19 (AP)—Samuel T. Bodine, 78, chairman of the board of the United Gas Improvement Co., died today in his home in Villanova. He was a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, serving vice-president of the Welsbach Light Co., a trustee of the Pennsylvania Mutual Life Insurance Co., and a director of the Charleston, S. C., Mining & Manufacturing Co. One of his three children is Mrs. Eleanor Gray Perry of Cohasset, Mass.

Dreiser, Daughter in Auto Smashup

New York, Aug. 19 — Theodore Dreiser, novelist, escaped death or serious injury by a narrow margin when his car, driven by Mrs. Clara L. Clark of Germantown, Penn., crashed into another automobile, skidded 200 feet, went through a fence and turned over an embankment near Mount Pleasant.

Helen Dreiser, 32, daughter of the writer, suffered lacerations of the face and body.

LOVE TURNS TO ASHES AS FIANCE FLITS WITH $7000

It was a day of action for Mrs. Phiscilla Sudak of Peabody, 40, a widow and a disillusioned woman.

She fed her trousseau to the flames.

She tossed her romance out the window to the winds.

And she swore out warrants that she hopes will throw her erstwhile sweetheart into jail.

Burning of her wedding garments, she said, meant that she agreed with police, that her sweetheart had swindled her. That her love was ashes.

She then made formal complaint in Salem court, alleging she was "fleeced" of more than $7000, and naming Alec Sawchuck, whom she had expected to marry next week.

Sawchuck, she told police today, and his friend, John Sinkogitch. A John Doe warrant was issued for a third man.

The three were "big gas and greasing men," accordin to what they told Mrs. Sudak. And as she had been keeping company with Sawchuck for not less than two years, she trusted them all.

She drew the $7000 from Salem and Peabody banks to finance a chain of gas stations for the three men. The put it with their own mons and left it in safe-keeping with her. But when she opened the package it contained $20

Sawchuck, she told police today, showed her a gas station in New York city to prove he was in the business. She still believes that.

Mayor of Spanish Town Killed in Riot

Saragossa, Spain, Aug. 19 (AP)—Dispatches received today from the town of Letux, Spain, said the mayor and one citizen were killed and an officer of the municipal guard seriously wounded during a riot, the origin of which was not explained.

Read and Rejoice, you lovers of good food!

Borden offers you an epicure's choice of the finest cheeses in all the world

ROMAN NOBLES at their banquet tables, Louis XIV savoring the delicacies of the world, the epicures of the 90's who thronged Delmonico's—these people knew cheese. Knew its glamour, its variety—and the delicate social distinctions that rule its use and service.

But even these epicures of bygone ages would envy you the array of wonderful cheeses that Borden has spread before you. Cheeses of every type—for every taste, for every menu. From rich, creamy Cream Cheese to nut-sweet Liederkranz. From mellow-mild American Cheese to luscious Camembert and tangy Roquefort.

Never before has such a complete line of cheeses been assembled. And never before has such quality coaxed appetites into action. Borden has raised even the most familiar kinds of cheese to such heights of deliciousness as would tempt the most patrician palate.

Such variety and quality give Americans their first real opportunity to know cheese. To know this romantic, healthful food as only a few travelled epicures and social leaders have known it before. To know the proper cheese for every meal—to know the proper cheese for every dish.

To aid you in this knowledge—to help you become a cheese-epicure—Borden publishes below an authentic cheese guide. Let it guide all your purchases of cheese. You can get Borden's Cheeses at every good food store.

AN EPICURE'S GUIDE TO CHEESE

With a complete list of Borden's Cheeses—their types and proper uses

AMERICAN Types

Borden's Packaged American Cheese
Fine, mellow cheese with a rare old-fashioned flavor. For sandwiches, or with pie, or for general use in cooking.

Borden's Chateau
The delectable new cheese flavor—mild and mellow—fast becoming one of America's favorites. For sandwiches, desserts, salads, etc.

Borden's Chateau Pimento
Rich, mellow Chateau made extra zestful with fine pimentos. For sandwiches, desserts, salads, etc.

Borden's Cream Cheese
Plain, Pimento, or Relish. Double-rich and creamy. For appetizers, salads and sandwiches. Or serve as dessert with crackers and Bar le Duc or currant jelly.

Borden's Pimento Cheese
Fine American cheese with tangy pimentos added. Delicious in sandwiches.

Borden's Grated American Cheese
Well cured American cheese, already grated—for general cooking use.

Borden's Pineapple Cheese
Very hard, well ripened American cheese molded in a pineapple shape. Use grated for general cooking purposes. Or serve with crackers for an unusual dessert.

GERMAN Types

Liederkranz
One of the world's most distinctive cheeses. Mellower than Camembert; not as ripe as Limburger. Delicious with crackers as dessert; or for sandwiches, appetizers and salads.

Borden's Packaged Limburger
Limburger flavor modified to meet the general taste. For sandwiches; or with crackers as dessert following such dishes as frankfurters and sauerkraut.

Borden's Limburger
Ripe, full-flavored, creamy Limburger. For sandwiches; or as dessert following strong-flavored dishes.

Borden's Packaged Brick Cheese
Ripe, sweetish in taste—a little stronger than Swiss, milder than Limburger. For sandwiches; with pie, fruit, or with crackers for dessert.

Borden's Limburger Sandwich Spread
In glass jars. Spreads easily. For sandwiches; or on crackers.

★

18-Foot Vault! Whew!
Japs Soon Will Do It.
George Brown Vouches.

Kenney Also Says So.
Returning Olympians.
Spill Inside Chatter.

Boston Runs Olympics All Over Again

BOSTON HAS GONE Olympique. With the return of the home class, the advent of the Finnish Olympic Team for Sunday's meet in Worcester, the arrival of Juan Zabala and Paul DeBruyn for the Rockingham Marathon, they're running the Olympic Games here all over again. And great are the tales the California sojourners bring back. "Watch the Japs in athletics from now on," says William P. Kenney, president of the New England A. A. U. "They cleaned up in the swimming events, gave us a new world's record holder in the hop, step and jump, uncovered one of the best sprinters I ever have seen and flashed a pole vaulter who made an American soar to a world's record height to win by an eyelash."

"When these Japs learn how to vault they'll come pretty close to clearing 18 feet," exclaimed George Brown of the Boston A. A.

"Eighteen feet!" we ejaculated.

"Yes, 18 feet," insisted Brown. "That little saffron-skinned wizard, who forced Bill Miller, the American, to better 14 feet, could have improved his vault a foot and a half with the right form. There is no telling how high the Japs will soar when they master the science and technique of vaulting. They are a natrnally acrobatic race. Pole vaulting is acrobatic. It's an event that is made to order for the Japs."

"I THINK GEORGE is right about the Japs doing close to 18 feet in years to come," put in Kenney. "You must remember that some of us have seen the pole vault record improve five feet here in America. Why it wasn't a lifetime ago that nine feet in the pole vault was the world's record. If the Americans boosted the record five feet in a quarter of a century the Japs, who are better moulded by Nature for pole vaulters, are likely to add four feet more to the record."

"WHAT MAKES FOR athletic success," put in Brown, "is interest and enthusiasm. The Japs have both interest and enthusiasm. In addition, they have genius. Some French writer once characterized genius as 'The capacity for taking infinite pains.' That's just what the Japs are doing in athletics, 'taking infinite pains.' Talk about Teutonic thoroughness, you should see the way the Japs have gone and are going about things. Take the success of the Orientals in swimming, for instance. It all began in Amsterdam four years ago. Some of us will recall how the Japs swarmed all around the tank and the swimmers, talking, learning something from every swimmer and coach, snapping picture after picture, still and movie, getting the swimmers in every conceivable style and position. The Japs took the information gained by eternal questioning, close observation and the all seeing eye of the camera back to Japan for study and execution. The result was the sweeping success of the Japanese male swimmers at Los Angeles."

"STUDYING FORM BY moving pictures is nothing new," interrupted Kenney. "Jack Sharkey, for instance, has films of all his important fights and those of Tunney, Dempsey, Schmeling and prospective opponents. Jack learned many things from these films, running them off slow motion, that he couldn't learn in the ring or in a ringside seat. The Japs learned much by their motion picture study at Amsterdam. They learned more at Los Angeles. Why they were here, there, everywhere with their cameras. I thought they were especially active in filming American sprinters, hurdlers and jumpers. And they blackened the rowing course. They tell me Japan has ordered a whole fleet of American racing shells. You'll have to watch the Japs atop of the water as well as in the water in future Olympiads."

WE ASKED KENNEY and Brown what was the most impressive victory in the Olympics.

"Zabala's great race in the Marathon," answered Brown.

"Yes, I'd say the same thing," answered Kenney, "the victory of the wiry little Argentinian in the Marathon and Wee Willie Carr's record-wrecking dash in the 400-meter classic. I never saw such an exhibition of stay and stamina as the little Broncho of the Pampas gave over that long, blistering 26-mile 385-yard trail. And I never saw such an exhibition of sustained speed as Carr flashed in the 400-meter event. I didn't believe we ever would see a quarter-miler the superior of Maxey Long and Ted Meredith, but I saw one in Carr. Of course that wonderful Los Angeles track had something to do with Carr's sensational wrecking of the record, but track or no track Carr undoubtedly is the greatest quarter-miler that ever dug up cinders."

"THAT TRACK," said Brown, "was the fastest ever, but it raised Ned with our hurdlers. It was so fast and springy they couldn't regulate their strides properly, and along about the third hurdle were compelled to slow up to shorten and 'time' their strides. If Beard, Saling and Keller had accustomed themselves to that wonderful Los Angeles track they would have done 14 seconds as sure as you're born."

"ZABALA'E GREAT RACING in the Marathon was the most impressive bit of distance running I ever have seen," reiterated Brown after a pause. "You must remember it was done under extraordinary weather conditions. The thermometer dropped 20 degrees during the progress of the race. It started in blazing heat and wound up in a chilly temperature you never would expect this time of the year. It raised Ned with some of the boys. I think it largely was responsible for Paul DeBruyn, the German, not being up front and fighting it out with the Argentinian."

"DEBRUYN GOT THAT cramp at six miles," interrupted Kenney. "The sudden change in the weather didn't have a chance to affect him. But I will say that the DeBruyn I saw in the Los Angeles race was not the same man I saw win our Boston Marathon last April. He wasn't 'right,' that's sure. If DeBruyn and Zabala hook up at Rockingham I wouldn't be surprised if the blond-haired Teuton turned the tables on the Argentinian."

"CAN DEBRUYN, in the same condition he was in when he won the Boston Marathon, beat Paavo Nurmi?" we queried.

"Well, if DeBruyn and Zabala are right," answered Brown, "the both of 'em will make the Flying Finn run faster than he ever did before."

"You said it!" agreed Kenney. "Paul DeBruyn certainly is a Flying Dutchman!"

GARDEN SEEKS FIGHT PROMISE FROM SHARKEY

By DAVIS J. WALSH

New York, Aug. 19 (INS)—Conscious of current whispers to the effect that, barring an occasional contest of skill with some relatively reliable and, in fact, praiseworthy bum, Jack Sharkey plans to keep the heavyweight championship practically in perpetuity, the Madison Square Garden Corporation today asked the man to declare the honesty of his intentions toward the Schmeling-Walker winner.

The Madison Square Corporation, in fact, called the man about this some three days ago, inditing a full-rate telegram in its haste to still those wagging tongues.

BASK STAIRS GOSSIP

As yet, however, he seems to have vouchsafed no reply, but everybody around the Garden is confident that this is on the way and undoubtedly it will arrive in the course of time. So will the Harvard-Yale boat race.

Ordinarily, of course, the Garden would not wish to be eponymously with the heavyweight champion. But in this case Schmeling and Walker have just signed for a championship elimination contest in September and somehow there is something very disturbing in the spectacle of two men fighting for the right to fight a man who may not wish them to do so.

Besides, the Garden is a little distressed about the back-stairs gossip who are saying unkind things, some of them having been at no slight pains to state that the heavyweight champion of the world is a man who not only will not fight very often again, but can not.

MADE $500,000

However, Sharkey is a somewhat discouraging champion. For one thing he looks bloated and blowsy and just a little sodden with success, clearly indicating that age had come upon him practically in the night.

For another, he was inspired to fight in other years by a desire for the title and an imperious need of money. He now has both, which leaves him right out there in front with nothing to do and no great urge to do it.

BAR MALONEY AT CARNERA, GAGNON GO

Tiverton, R. I., Aug 19—Weather permitting, Primo Carnera and Jack Gagnon will meet to settle ring differences in Mr. Bat Silva's Tiverton Bowl here tonight.

An alarmingly large crowd of several thousand cash customers, a dozen or so challengers and twice that many managers and promoters arrived at the scene only to learn that the fight had been called off a few minutes before the opening curtain last night.

Gagnon returned to his hotel in Fall River and there set a good example for the several managers and promoters present, by amusing himself with a cross word puzzle.

Locked out of the park, if they appeared at all, were Jim Maloney and friends, who were expected to challenge Primo for a fight at some future date.

McLarnin Go Puts Benny on 'Spot'

By HYPE IGOE

New York, Aug. 19—Benny Leonard has finally placed himself on the "spot." His hankering for a fistic duel with Jimmy McLarnin is no longer a whim. It soon will be hard fact.

The former lightweight champion of the world and Pop Foster for Jimmy have agreed to terms. The two meet at the new Garden Bowl on Oct. 3, the route to be ten rounds.

BENNY CONFIDENT

Leonard is positive that he can make Jimmy miss enough punches so that he, himself, can romp off with the decision. For one thing, Leonard will have close to eight pounds advantage over McLarnin, and that is a lot with a fellow who knows how to make use of it.

Leonard's friends are divided over the proposition. Can Benny take the McLarnin kind of punch and keep going? None of the fellows he has met, with the possible exception of Billy the Kid Townsend, can hit with anywhere near the heft that Jimmy can pack into a wallop.

ONCE A MASTER BOXER

McLarnin was a master boxer in his day. He began by being a will o' the wisp and didn't get down to hard hitting until he had outgrown a couple of divisions.

Whether or not he ever could box on a parity with Leonard is

BRUINS, CUBS MAY TRAIN AT QUEBEC CITY

If satisfactory arrangements are completed, Pres. C. F. Adams will order his Bruins and Cubs to report for practice at Quebec City on October 15.

Recently, the owners of the Quebec rink installed artificial ice and as soon as Pete Adams received this information, he started to negotiate with the Canadian promoters.

In the past, the Bruins and Cubs have reported here about the middle of October, practising at the Boston Arena and the Garden, when these rinks were available. One Fall the Bruins communted daily to Providence which was not only expensive but a hardship on the players.

According to the present plans, the Bruins and the Cubs will play exhibition games with Quebec, Three Rivers and Chicoutimi during their training period.

Quebec City is one of the most rabid of all Canadian hockey centres. At various times, National Hockey League clubs have dropped into Quebec for exhibition games and have never failed to draw capacity houses, regardless of the calibre of their opponents.

Lady Luck Spurns Advances of Our Allston Warriors

Special to the Boston American

Chicago, Aug. 19—Three straight defeats at the hands of the league-leading Cubs, with whom they close a four-game series this p. m., added to five setbacks in a row before arriving here, have wrecked the pennant chances of the Boston Braves beyond repair.

Eight full games off the roof, the best the McKechnieites can hope to do now is get back in the first division, the lowest berth of which is three games away from them today.

And unless they break their losing streak very soon their principal concern will be to avoid the cellar, as they are only 1½ games ahead of the seventh-place Giants at this writing.

It isn't that the Warriors aren't playing good baseball. They are.

WARRIORS FIGHTING

In every game here they put on a great show. They battled 19 innings in the second contest and came right back and fought 15 innings yesterday. Yet in all three tilts they were forced to swallow defeat by a margin of one run.

It's too late for them to put on a pennant-winning spurt, but if they continue to play the same brand of ball they have shown in the Windy City they ought to finish in the money and have plenty to say about where the flag goes.

Despite the loss the Tribe went into fifth place as the Cards lost two.

Manager Bill McKechnie is in a rather bad way for hurlers today, having used all his aces in the first three games. He will call upon either Ben Cantwell of Shucks Pruett.

CUBS' LEAD IS 2½ GAMES

Pat Malone looks like a certainty for the Cubs. The natives now have a 2½-game lead in the race as the Pirates and Dodgers were rained out yesterday, but Mgr. Charlie Grimm doesn't feel that margin is wide enough to warrant him starting gambling at this time.

Mgr. Charlie was the big stickler in Thursday's 15-inning contest, getting three doubles. Far more important than any of these blows, however, was a single by Riggs Stephenson, which followed a wild and error in the 15th and sent over the deciding marker.

The Cubs were never behind in the contest.

They scored a run in the first and put over two more in the third, after the Braves had tied the count in the first of the frame.

BETTS HURLS 14 INNINGS

The Warriors added their second run in the seventh and tied the game for the second time in the ninth.

Walter "Huck" Betts hurled the first fourteen innings for the visitors. He was taken out for a pinch-hitter in the 15th and Harry "Socks" Seibold finished up and was charged with the loss.

The Braves did all their scoring at the expense of Charlie Root, who started and lasted until a pinch-batter replaced him in the tenth. Smith and Bush followed. The latter hurled the last frame and just as on the day before, when he tossed only the 19th chapter, he received credit for the win.

EX-SOX FLASH, LACHANCE, IS DEAD

Waterbury, Ct., Aug. 19—The baseball world was saddened today by the news of the death here of George Candy) Lachance, aged 63, one of the most graceful first basemen of diamond history, who played on the Red Sox world's championship team of 1903. The ex-major league star, who played his final game in 1920 in the all-Boston Old-Timers game, had been ill for more than a year.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Mary Lachance, two sons, George J. and Charles H., one daughter, Gladys M., and four brothers and sisters, all of Waterbury.

HENIGAN, DEMAR IN WASHINGTON MARATHON

Washington, Aug. 19 (AP)—Bent on setting a new world record, 125 long-distance runners on Saturday will pound the pavement for 26 miles 385 yards from Mount Vernon to Washington in the Evening Star's Marathon run for the National A. A. U. championship.

Three noted runners—Billy Ages of Baltimore, defending champion; Paul De Bruyn, German star, and Clarence De Mar, seven-time winner of the classic Boston Patriots' Day Marathon are among the field.

SEMPLE IN RACE

Other noted entrants are Jimmy Henigan Medford, Mass.; Percy Wyer, 98-pound Canadian runner; John Semple, West Lynn, Mass.; former Eastland champion, and Russell Jekel of New York.

What the Stars Did

By the Associated Press

Riggs Stephenson, Cubs—His single in 15th drove in run that beat Braves.

George Stumpf, Red Sox—Tripled in 15th and scored run that beat Browns on long fly.

Chuck Klein and Jim Elliott, Phillies—Former pounded Cardinal pitching for two doubles and single in first game; latter halted them with eight hits in nightcap.

Walte Hoyt, Giants—Pitched effectively to beat Reds, 7-3.

BIG SHAKEUP OF M. G. A. OFFICIALS AHEAD

CHASE TO QUIT BERTH AT END OF SEASON

By BILL GRIMES

Except for the Inter-State and Leslie Cup matches, the present regime of the Massachusetts Golf Association has come to a close. At the end of the season President T. C. Chase will retire and there will be more or less of a general shakeup of the officials of the association.

Since Bart Stephenson was elected head of the M. G. A. in 1920, the secretary-treasurer has succeeded to the throne at the expiration of the president's term of office. It is also the custom for the incoming president to reappoint the executive committee intact for one year, after which he usually instigates a complete change, but all of the other committees are dissolved.

If the usual custom is pursued at the annual meeting this fall Henry A. Wentworth will be the next president of the Massachusetts Golf Association. Due to the fact that Wentworth has been absent from this section during most of the golf season, the M. G. A. may establish a precedent and select a new leader other than the secretary.

FEW CARRY BURDEN

During this season, Joseph L. S Easton, Worcester; Charles H Cross, Unicorn; Joseph A. Galvin, Commonwealth; Robert L. Hutchinson, Kernwood and Arthur H Ross, Marshfield, have carried the burden of responsibility and performed most of the work during championships.

L. L. S Barton is chairman of the tournament committee. He has taken keen interest in his work and given the utmost satisfaction. The M. G. A. needs a president of the Joe Barton type, one who knows golf from all angles and is a fearless ruler as well as a fair one.

In the past, however, chairmen of tournament committees have seldom received any recognition. With the exception of R. M. Gardiner, tournament committee chairmen have been sidetracked and quietly dropped from the M. G. A.

For instance, C. Campbell Patterson, The Country Club, who was chairman of the tournament committee in 1930 and 1931, had few peers and no superior, as a M. G. A. executive. But despite his unbiased judgments and ability on the berth, Patterson was not reappointed but was dropped from the association.

M. G. A. RETARDED

For years the M. G. A. has been retarded and handicapped by social climbers and publicity seekers, the majority of whom rarely appear at championships and when they do condescend to attend are so carried away by their own importance they are not able to do the best usually responsible for most of whatever confusion arises.

Until such time as the M. G. A is composed of men who are not in the association for the sole purpose of personal exploitation conditions will remain unsatisfactory.

The M. G. A. needs men of the Joe Barton, Joe Galvin, Leon H. Rogers, Walter L. Shrigley, C. Campbell Patterson, Winthrop N. Trowbridge, Robert L. Hutchins type, all of whom are well posted as to the rules of the game and would be excellent executives.

Henry C. Nichols, former president of the Albemarle Golf Club and now a member at Brae Burn, is one of the many golf executives whose ability the M. G. A. refused to recognize. After three years as a member of the executive committee of the M. G. A. Henry Nichols retired from the organization.

Due to the many weak kneed decisions which have been rendered by the local powers that be in golf during the past two years, the members of the M. G. A. are about ready to demand a complete new deal. A general shakeup which includes the establishment of a precedent such as the selection of a promising executive who has not served his apprenticeship as secretary, is the only solution which will bring the M. G. A. back in favor.

GOMEZ SWAP FOR FERRELL UNLIKELY

By RILEY GRANNON

That's a strange baseball tale that comes out of New York.

I mean the one which reports that Vernon "Lefty" Gomez, Yanks' star, and Wes Ferrell, Cleveland's star right-hander, will be traded, one for the other, when the current campaign is over.

Nobody in authority on either club will admit the possibilities of such a swap, and I'll admit it doesn't sound very logical, but strange things happen in this game of baseball, both on and off the field.

Who would have believed a month ago that Rogers Hornsby would be looking for a job today?

STAR SWAPS RARE

Star for star swaps are rare. Magnates usually trade to strengthen either their teams or their pocketbooks. No money would be involved in a Gomez-Ferrell exchange and each club would be giving away an ace to get an ace.

Furthermore the few deals of this sort that have been made, have proved disastrous for one of the clubs. The Giants and Pirates exchanged mound aces a few years back when Ralph Grimes went to Pittsburgh and won 26 games. Vic Aldridge went to New York and won one. The Giants and Cards swapped Frankie Frisch and Rogers Hornsby. It helped the Cards a lot, but if the Giants gained it was a secret to John McGraw.

What, then, would lead the owners of Gomez and Ferrell to even consider such a swap?

REASONS FOR TRADE

There must be a reason or two, even if the proprietors of these two young men have never given a thought to such an exchange. The boys who start such stories must have some convincing arguments or nobody would listen.

In this case, it is Ferrell's independence and Gomez' size. How ingenious, these gossipers.

It seems that early in the season, Ferrell talked out of turn one day and declared that Joe McCarthy Yanks pilot, was the best manager in baseball.

Now it was strictly according to Hoyle for Wes to have that opinion but it wasn't according to Emily Post for him to make it public.

Every ball player, you know, should rank his own boss as the nine ultra of master-minds.

CRACK CUT PECK

Naturally, Ferrell's crack didn't add to his popularity with Roger Peckinpaugh, Indian pilot. Neither did it lower his stock in McCarthy's eyes.

Then again, Ferrell is a strong-minded guy. He places a high value on his services annually and thinks he should be paid it. He feels he deserves a thousand dollars a victory. His bosses don't, but they have to give in. Pitchers who win well over 20 games a season are too scarce to leave one idle for the size of a few thousand dollars.

That's more than enough to make the Cleveland management wince every time the hurler's name is mentioned. But it isn't all. Ferrell, it is claimed, won't bear down except in the pinches and pitches as he and not the catcher or manager desires.

Consequently, it is felt, Cleveland would let Ferrell go if they could get a hurler of Gomez' class in exchange.

GOMEZ TOO LIGHT

That's the Cleveland side. The New York angle is slightly different.

Gomez is popular in the "big town," both with the fans and the Yankee front office, because Joe McCarthy down. No fault can be found with his work or his temperament.

Gomez' build, however, is not strong. He doesn't weigh over 180 pounds, much too light for his height. Because of this handicap, he doesn't figure to last as long in the game as the Indian ace.

And Col. Ruppert wouldn't worry about Ferrell's salary demands and Joe McCarthy wouldn't shed any tears over possessing a young man who rated Marse Joe as the game's greatest manager.

So, the gossipers say, the Yanks would be willing to make the swap.

ROSLINDALE, ST. THOMAS IN DUEL TONIGHT

Roslindale and St. Thomas, the teams that tied for the first-half championship in the City League with the Saints winning out in the playoff, meet again tonight at Healy Field, Roslindale.

Although it is a relatively unimportant second-half clash there is plenty of interest in the game. The reason is that the fans want to get a chance to compare the two teams and to see if Roslindale has gained much more power with the addition of new stars.

When his team missed out on the first-half pennant dropping two series games to St. Thomas, Manager Gallagher Wade signed Bill Hunnefield for second base ar l Ted Donovan for first base.

Another record crowd is due to watch the City League game at the Dorchester Town field between St. Catherine's and St. Mark's. The Saints of Charlestown still stay near the top and had to battle the revivified Roslindale to a courageous 4-4 tie to keep up there.

COHASSET SHOW IN FINAL TWO DAYS

Competition in the annual Cohasset horse show on the estate of Mr and Mrs. Hugh Bancroft at Cohasset continues today and winds up tomorrow. If the battle for blues is as fine in the concluding days as in the first two sessions, the show will be marked down as the outstanding affair of its kind this season.

Competition in all departments was keen yesterday.

Hugh Bancroft, Jr.'s, St. Cloud, a hunter and jumping pony, won the Association of American Horse Shows medal with a great performance in Corinthian jumping.

The novice hunters thrilled with Sir Richard, a bay gelding, cantering away with the blue over a large field for H. Hollon Crowell of Boston. Pair jumping went to Killarney Rose and Greylight, ridden by Mary McElwain and Constance Green, respectively.

Ladies' Lady, champion three-gaited mare owned by Miss Bancroft, left the ring as winner over a gathering of 15 and not over 15.2 saddle horses.

Allan J. Wilson of Newton had victory in the pair saddle horse competition, his Montgomery Lady and Montgomery Patsy winning with Samuel James and his daughter, Helen, riding.

WORTHINGTON ON RETIRED LIST

Chicago, Aug. 19 (AP)—Charlie Jamieson, one of Cleveland's baseball immortals, today was placed on the voluntarily retired list by Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis.

The veteran flyhawk in the Indians, used almost exclusively this season as a pinch hitter, has suffered from abscessed teeth and asked to be retired for the rest of the season. It is doubtful whether he ever would return to the game as a player.

BURKE ON LIST

Bob Burke of the Washington Senators, who pitched a no run, no hit game last year against Boston, also was placed on the voluntarily retired list. Burke was released on option to Chattanooga but came back ill and asked to be retired for the year.

Outfielder Robert Worthington of the Boston Braves, out with a broken leg, was the third major league player to be given voluntary retirement by the commissioner.

Young Peters Improved

John Peters, 17, son of ex-Mayor Peters, who is suffering from infantile paralysis, is steadily gaining, it was reported today.

Babe Has Own Version of Marriage

Chicago, Aug. 19 (AP)—It seems certain that Mildred Didrickson, the Texas girl, who runs more hurdles in less time than any other lass in the world, isn't thinking about getting married.

"Marriage," she said here last night, "is just a decathlon.

"I'm an all-around athlete, but there are 10 events to do in a day that would wear me out." She named them as follows:

Dish-washing, scrubbing, washing, cooking, mending, caring for the baby, cleaning the house, going to the grocer, hanging up the ice card making the beds and darning socks.

FINN QUITS AS POLE DEFEATS RALPH HILL

Soldier Field, Chicago, Aug. 13 (AP)—A 5000-meter race between Lauri Lehtinen of Finland and Ralph Hill, American star from Oregon, expected to settle the dispute over their famous finish in the recent Olympiad, tonight resulted in victory for neither, as Janusz Kusocinski of Poland romped off with the decision.

The race, under artificial lighting, and billed as the feature of a post-Olympic meet in Soldier Field, proved nothing much, for Lehtinen, who got the judges' decision over Hill at Los Angeles, failed even to finish.

35,000 SEE GAMES.

Hill gave the Polish ace, Olympic champion at 10,000 meters, little competition, although he made a gallant bid in the last lap. Lehtinen, who said he was handicapped by a lame ankle, dropped out at about 2800 meters. The time 14 minutes 38.9 seconds, was just short of a half-minute slower than the time credited Hill and Lehtinen at Los Angeles.

About 35,000 spectators watched the meet.

Stella Walsh stole the show from Babe Didrikson of Texas, star of the women's branch of the Olympiad. Miss Walsh tied the world record of 11.9 seconds in winning the 100 meters run and set a new mark of 24.1 seconds for the 200 meters. She won the broad jump and finished fourth in the discus.

BABE WINS HIGH JUMP

Miss Didrikson won the high jump at five feet two inches, but after breaking the discus record with a toss of better than 233 feet, remained to watch Jadwiga Wajsowa of Poland win with a heave of 137 feet 3¼ inches.

SCHMELING TO SAIL SUNDAY

New York, Aug. 19 (INS)—Max Schmeling, former heavyweight boxing champion, will sail from Germany on Sunday to meet Mickey Walker here in a 15-round bout on September 19. Articles were signed here yesterday. Madison Square Garden will promote it.

Schmeling will receive 40 per cent of the gate, Walker 10 per cent, and the Free Milk Fund for Babies, Inc., will also benefit. Walker will train at Summit, N. J., and the German at Speculator, N. Y.

MOVIES MADE JAPS FAMOUS IN WATER

By FRANK G. MENKE

Los Angeles, Aug. 19 (INS)—This is one for Bob Ripley, the gadzooker, who asks you to have faith in his statements, or call him Ananias. What does he care?

Those youthful Japanese who made the world ashamn to the supremacy of Nippon in swimming, learned how to do it from gazing at aquatic gyrations as shown in moving pictures.

"Two years ago I was in Japan on an exhibition tour with some other swimmers," declared Johnny Weismuller, who was champion of champions over a long sweep of tempus. "Arriving there I saw some of these very youngsters who won championships, or cracked world's records in the Olympiad, kicking around in the water and doing right well by themselves.

USED MOVING PICTURES

"When I asked who was their teacher, I am informed that the basic knowledge of free style, back stroke and breast stroke was being imparted to them via moving pictures, both fast and slow motion.

"About five years ago the Japanese, who, over the progress of centuries, had made swimming a sort of sacred ritual, became anxious to learn to dash through the waters a la American, Australian and European.

"Instead of hiring tutors from different parts of the world, they sent to the different countries and had pictures shipped in.

IMITATED PICTURES

"The boys studied these and went out and tried to imitate the motions. This they were doing when I arrived, together with the rest of our small troupe.

"We were given a wonderful reception. Every fledgling swimmer within a wide area turned out to see us do exhibitions. We really were first of the occidental swimmers to appear in Japan after it became ambitious to learn the modern style, and the youngsters watched every move we made.

"Pictures were taken of us doing everything that could be done in water, and these were added to the collection in Japan. Some of the boys who made history for their country during the Olympiad came to us for a few pointers and, of course, we were mighty happy to add vocal help."

VINES MEETS DAVEY JONES

Newport, R. I., Aug. 19 — Ellsworth Vines of Texas, court champion, meets a strong opponent here today in the Casino court play when he faces Davey Jones of New York in a semi-final match.

Jones' winning streak which carried him to the semi-final round has been the surprise of the tourney, as Jones is unseeded.

In the other single match Greg Mangin meets Wilmer Allison.

TAP'S TRIPLE COMBINATION

The numerologist who picks the day's outstanding numbers for Tap is getting hot. He's batting for .833 lately, and with a little more study of the stars, expects to hit the combination right on the nose.

And if you have any use for them, they're your's for the finding.

So What?

—By JOE MOONEY—

It was Gene Tunney Day at Chicago yesterday, with the Braves taking another long count.

As matters stand now, the Braves are just two innings short of being two games ahead of themselves.

The Carnera-Gagnon fight at Tiverton was rained out last night, to the evident disappointment of a large crowd of customers and challengers.

The weather was overcast, but they couldn't tell if it was because of the clouds or because Primo was standing in the sun and casting a shadow over Rhode Island.

The Bruins will have a month of fall training at Quebec this year. And you'll see the hockey writers come back from the training camp with the usual sunburn.

SOX TACKLE THE TIGERS HERE TOMORROW

By JOE CASHMAN

The fighting Red Sox rost today awaiting the Detroit Tigers, who will arrive at the Fens tomorrow for five games in four afternoons.

A more welcome or timely vacation hasn't been enjoyed by the natives this season. After their nerve-wracking 15-inning victory over the Browns in the final game, which gave them a 2 to 1 edge in the series, a day off on which to recuperate is exactly what the doctor would order.

It should put them in perfect fettle to continue their fine playing of late against the Bengals, who still have hopes of crashing the first division.

SOX NOT QUITTING

The Sox are still deep in the basement and 8½ games in an almost insurmountable handicap with only 38 games left to play, but if the local athletes realize this, they aren't letting it discourage them.

While most other clubs appear to be merely playing out the string, the McManusmen are playing their best ball of the season and fighting and hustling for every game as though a title hinged on the result.

It must mean very little to them, for instance, whether or no they won the final tilt from the Browns. Yet they laughed at a one-run lead in the 11th and a three-run advantage in the 14th and carried on to victory in the most thrilling and toughest battle of the local season on either park.

MARTY MAKES BOYS FIGHT

Marty McManus may not have performed any miracles as a pilot as yet, but he certainly has converted a group of forlorn, downhearted athletes into as courageous a team as any in the majors. He also has convinced Boston fans that if given a little help in the way of new players, he'll go places and do things with the Fenway flock next season.

Most of Marty's fighting inspiration has come from the bench of late, but yesterday he had to do his stuff at third base as "Slug" Pickering messed up with a split finger. Which was most fortunate for the Sox.

They would have been licked when Jim Levey hit a home run in the 11th to break a 2 to 2 tie if the pilot hadn't been at the plate to hit "Bump" Hadley's first pitch over the wall in the last of the frame.

HELEN JACOBS MARCHES ON

Forest Hills, N. She advaced by defeating Marjorie Gladman Van Ryn of East Orange, N. J., in three sets, 2-6, 6-2, 6-1.

Helen didn't win easily. She was trailing by one set and she looked unsure of herself for four games in the second set. She took the rest of the match in stride.

BAN STANDS ON NURMI

PAAVO NOT TO RUN IN U.S. AS AMATEUR

If Boston track fans hope to see Paavo Nurmi run in the near future it must be with the Finn racing as a professional, for the National A. A. U. states that Nurmi can't run in any meet sanctioned by the A. A. U. in the U. S.

Thus it becomes improbable that Nurmi will race either at Worcester or at Rockingham. At the Salem, N. H., track it had been hoped to stage a Nurmi duel with Juan Zabala, who won the Olympic Marathon.

Nurmi can not run in an amateur track meet anywhere with the sanction of the A. A. U. or any of its subsidiaries, says J. Frank Facey, chairman of the registration committee of the New England A. A. A. U.

Facey had been asked to sanction Nurmi's entry for the Finnish meet at Worcester tomorrow.

He tried to contact with Dan Ferris, chairman of the National A. A. U. registration committee in Chicago. He failed in this effort, but his wire to Ferris was referred to President Avery Brundage of the A. A. U. and the latter's secretary, A. Lyman Bingham, sent the telegram to Facey:

Nurmi is under suspension by the International Federation and can not compete as an amateur athlete in any A. A. U. sanctioned meet.

COCHET PLAYS AT LONGWOOD

Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn, the national Wimbledon and Davis Cup doubles champions, are seeded at the head of the American list in the draw for the first annual national doubles championship, which open Monday at the Longwood Cricket Club, Chestnut Hill.

The foreign list is topped by the British team of "Bunny" Austin and Fred J. Perry. Back of them is the French duo of Henri Cochet and Marcel Bernard.

Cochet's appearance will be his first in this country since 1928, when he played in both the national singles and doubles championships.

His defeat at the hands of Ellsworth Vines in the final singles match at France a month ago has rankled the Frenchman considerably and he is eager to avenge his setback.

Cochet came to Boston yesterday and today he will go out to Longwood to tune up for the championship.

Fish and Game

By WIN BROOKS

Many a prize fish that should have been perpetuated for the den wall has gone the way of all dead flesh because the angler didn't know how to keep it until it reached the taxidermist.

Well, here's something to clip out and paste in your old fishing hat with your fondest hopes; as they used to say, "Here's how":

Handle it carefully. Don't damage skin or scales. Keep it wet with water or moist salt, out of the sun. If it is going some distance remove the entrails through a cut along the poor side, not along the belly.

But first outline its shape in pencil on paper. Wrap in wet cloth, muslin or cheese-cloth is best. Ice if possible. On salt water fish the fins should be heavily salted and the entrails should always be removed.

Winnepesaukee, of which Steve Frost, the Boston sportsman says, wrote so beautifully, is affording fine sport to many Greater Boston anglers.

From the old Wentworth farm on Long Island comes the report that Louis Hallas took his limit of four lake trout daily every day for a week. One day he had the limit at 9 o'clock in the morning, so he anchored in 90 feet of water to try for shad, or blue-fins. He caught one big shad and then another lake trout, which he put back.

Then he brought still another lake trout to net and decided he'd have to quit or be in contempt. Another guest took a 2½-pound bass and Charles Goss caught a 10-pound landlocked salmon.

* * *

Frost, who fished at Long Island for nine consecutive weeks one year, fishing every day, maintains that three-quarters of all the fish in Winnepesaukee are in one quarter of the lake—the northeast quarter. Fishermen at Echo Farm and at Brown's on Long Island Point, are making good catches.

The result is that the shot string follows the target course and improves chances of scoring.

M'LARNIN GO REAL TEST FOR BENNY

a question and the coming fight might settle the argument. Naturally Benny isn't the Leonard of old. He still gets away from punishment by using his noodle and past-master science.

What will happen if Jimmy drives through that beautiful defense? Can Ben take it? Is he impervious to punches? None of the fellows he has met up to date in this strange yet out and out remarkable comeback were deadly hitters.

But, it must be remembered that hard hitters were always duck soup for Leonard. He toyed with them. However, those were the days when Leonard could assimilate punches. He could withstand a killing sock on the chin if he got it and body punches were things to be laughed at.

If you want to lean back on a clever man's performance against McLarnin, you will only have to recall his battle with Sammy Mandell for the lightweight championship of the world. Jimmy might not have been at his best that night. He had made weight four different times for the fray because of rain postponements and might not have been strong at 135.

He never made that weight again and won't as long as he is boxing. He might come within four pounds of it, but not any closer. There is no good reason why he ever should be called upon to fight a lightweight again unless some out of town commission would permit Tony Canzoneri to meet McLarnin at catch weights.

BEN COULD MAKE LIMIT

As for Leonard, he could make the welterweight title if hard pressed, but that's just it—hard pressed. That's exactly what it would amount to.

Up to now, none of the men he has fought in this comeback have tagged Benny, except Townsend, and he landed a pip on Ben's jaw in the fourth round. The old boy didn't get flustered. He used his head with rare cunning. He admonished Billy the Kid not to listen to the roars of the Townsend rooters and that a young-ster like himself should pay full attention to the business at hand.

While this conversation was going on, Benny pushed Bill away and clouted him with a stinging left hook to the chin. It brought Bad Bill to his senses but it was too late to follow up his advantage. He never had Leonard in trouble after that.

Frankly, this bout will puzzle the best of them. It has me gaping into space with an adenoid stare. But should Jack Leonard, he'll probably stop him, but CAN HE HIT BENNY?

The Voice of Broadway

By Louis Sobol

The Funeral of a Colyumist!

(During his vacation Mister Sobol trespasses upon his admiring public by reprinting columns of his earlier days.)

They buried Louis Sobol yesterday afternoon.

While Duke Ellington's famous orchestra thundered out a syncopated "Happy Days Are Here Again" the body of the noted Broadway columnist was lowered into the grave. With a pale blue megaphone smuggling close to his lips, Rudy Vallee sang the "Stein Song" as the dirt thudded dully on the coffin. Sandwiches, pickles and hot coffee were served by Dave's Blue Room and Reuben's. A good time was had by all.

* * *

The ceremonies were impressive. N. T. G. and his Hollywood Restaurant girls (20 of them) danced at the grave. Molly O'Doherty, of Will Oakland's Terrace, sang "Little White Lies." Jean Malin, of the Club Abbay, gave his impersonation of Florence Mills in the "Shanghai Lil" manner, and at the conclusion of his offering, amid tumultuous applause, shook hands around the grave. Mr. Harry Hershfield, the cartoonist, who, in the course of his remarks, stated that among his many regrets was the fact that he had neglected to mention in his recent novel, Super-City (Little Lies, Company), that the departed Mr. Sobol was a great little guy. He responded to an enthusiastic encore by reciting the tale, appropria'e for this occasion, of the little Heb who used to find things in museum, and at the conclusion of his offering, amid tumultuous applause, shook hands around the grave.

A Real Champ

. . Jck Sharkey, our gallant world's champ, surprised his lovely Missus with a $2500 ermine cloak on their eighth wedding anniversary Wednesday . . . Then they celebrated with a quiet dinner at Weber Duck Inn with Mr. and Mrs. William (Summer at merchant) Kenedy . . . and a whole lot of new love went to their children who are up at Bow Lake, N. H.

Short, Short Story

One weekend recently, Herbie Sulkin, threw his accordion into the back of his car and shoved off for the return to the Hub . . . Enroute from Seabury, N. H., broke his eyeglasses. . . Couldn't see to drive . . . Picked up the next boy ride-thumber he found. . . Who said he could drive a car. . . He began twisting the wheel in strange ways . . . Ducking in and out of traffic . . . Finally a Johnnie-on-the-spot pinched them. Took them before a farmer-judge. . . Who, upon seeing that the lad no license . . . Coming from Georgia, "Where we didn't have to have 'em," he ans'ered. . . No balm to Herbie this information . . . He was too d to put up $100 bond, if he wanted to get on his way . . . Herbie couldn't plead "poor" not knowing what THAT meant . . . Well, it's a long, long story but eventually the judge turned his back while the Driving Marvel drove Herbie once more on his merriless way to the city . . . But just over the Massachusetts line he ran Herbie and car over a dog . . . That was fine cuisine etc. for Sulkin . . . He threw the ride-thumber out . . . Left him flat . . . And with broken specs in one hand and cash in his hear' he beg n thumbing his own way back to town, accordion and all . . . Just one of the joys of summer motoring

Questions—You Answer!

. . . should we tell that Seymour Pink, Roxbury's fire insurance adjuster, was gold-headed recently in Providence a few weeks back, or will we pass it along to you for just a gossip bit? . . . Why doesn't that Montrealing Alpert lad, who is swinging on again with letters and telegrams, slip us the low-down on that sextette of local playboys who last week-ended under a table up there? . . . Will Brookline's numero-uno-cane-toting barrister, A. Reginald Endell, ever find out why he caught that blueberry pie under his chin and why he was shoved out of that beach marathon dancing-pavilion place last saturday midnight and even though his present . . . "swang to "Who's Got Five Dollars," will he collect that for his . . . most headgear? . . . What Nilik at Andrews chap, interested in bonds, did the impossible last week by entertaining four of his current flames (not at the same part)—with the gals all saying "the most marvelous time"

A Secret, Eh?

The magic of mus . . . year ago during a shower at . . . es was taking place . . . Fred G. . . . the steamship tea . . . n . . . cannot help giving in to my desire . . . boning a marriage license and saying all those yes words the first of the month . . . Couples has tried a secret to make it but gossipers will make it? . . . She's doubly Yankee One since she's New England's Life-saver manageress

Gabbing On and On—

Lawrence boy and gal champing at the marriage bit, waiting for Depression to remove its sting are Mildred Gardner, responsible organ . . . structress and Arthur Sunderland . . . If Joe Frisco calls us "Lady About Town" Girl who he Orpheums it this week we'd tell all! . . . Duo of hello peaches you may be m eving are Dorothy Frank . . . n and Marion Donovan of the Milk street exchange . . . So Leo McCullough, Ed Gallagher and George Underwood bashovve political chatter nightly at the Back Bay News nook, eh? . . . Dancing De Linnas toiling and keeping cool nightly now at the Penn Athletic Club's roof in the Quaker City . . . That's Adele "Bubbles" Ferran of Needham that you see about places now with the brunette-blonde hair tints . . . Coal black is her hair excepting the long, thick bangs—muchly peroxided! . . . You have to see it to believe it . . . And we'd never recommend it for an elbow-tipster's after-midnight glimpsing . . . If Roxbury's Loretta Munn would loosen up and tell us who that white flannel clad Adonis was with her at Craigville Beach last weekend, we're sure we could sleep better nights . . . Model Virginia "Coleman's Blondie" Chauncey shouldn't lounge on the brink of Pemberton Inn's pool that way—all frilled up in white and saucy Juliet chapeau . . . No one noticed doing any swimming while Virginia lingered . . . Petite Demi Clegg, Columbia picture's star booker, fairest of them all vacationing at Pemberton . . .

Lionel Atwill, Lee Tracey Among Stars in Cast of Warner Film

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

"Doctor X" might write his own prescription for movie fans after this wise: Concoct a clever horror tale. Stir in comedy early, and often. Make class the keynote in every angle, acting, direction, everything. Then quaff in one long 80-minute draught.

When Tom Sperr, the Warner film chief here about, gets excited, there's something stirring in filmdom.

Come on up, here's something you want to see!" he invites.

Into the Warner projection room, and there we are—Lionel Atwill topping a brilliant cast on screen, horrors after horrors amazingly set forth, with such skill, with such deft realism, that we become simply a bunch of shock-absorbers. Then thanks he, the most pleasing and timely comic relief we can recall in a thriller picture.

That's "Doctor X," that rare thing in the film industry, a "box office natural." Which is the synonym for smash hit.

Today that photoplay has its public premiere at the Metropolitan, and it will be interesting to get fan comment on its excellence, and whether or not it isn't the best of all the horror dramas.

Atwill is a man well known to "legit" lovers locally; a grand actor here on the silver sheet, conviction itself from the start to the exciting climax. Lee Tracey, too, looms for the humor crown, taking the sting out of the most grewsome scenes, and begetting vast laughter.

Yes, "Doctor X" is the kind of picture that proves prosperity's presence in the public's response to its own prescription of excellence.

DEATH THREATS TO POLITICAL LEADER

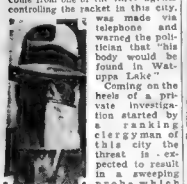
By THE MASKED REPORTER

Copyright, 1932, by Boston Evening American. All Rights Reserved.

Fall River, Aug. 19—A prominent politician of this city whose name I have agreed to withhold was threatened with death last night if he continued "sticking his nose" into the "nigger pool" racket which is flourishing here under alleged police protection.

The threat, purported to have come from one of the three agents controlling the racket in this city, was made via telephone and warned the politician that "his body would be found in Watuppa Lake."

Coming on the heels of a private investigation started by a ranking clergyman of this city the threat is expected to result in a sweeping probe which may involve city officials.



Masked Reporter

"For several weeks the "nigger pool" racket has been the subject of widespread discussion here and it has been openly charged that police were making no attempts to curb the street sales of number writers.

Some of the busiest street corners were being used by the writers as meeting places with customers. The latter included everyone from children with pennies to gamble up to business men with dollars to play "on the nose." Stung by criticism of his department, Chief of Police Abel J. Villette ordered plainclothesmen a week ago to clear the streets of writers. So far only one man, "Tee" White, former soccer football player, has been arrested in connection with the police drive.

THREAT FOLLOWS JOKE

He was picked up on Main st. after police had found alleged lottery tickets in his possession. He was found guilty and paid a $50 fine.

Apparently the police investigation fell short of the approval of the clergyman for, I learned today, he began an investigation of his own following reports that the agents were taking almost as much cash out of the city daily as the board of public welfare was distributing to unemployed and their families.

I had no sooner been informed of the private investigation when word reached me of the death threat telephoned to the local politician after he made a joking remark to a number writer in a Pleasant st. drug store.

BIG BUSINESS RACKET

The politician inquired of the number writer how much "cut" he was getting from the agent for whom he worked. When the writer replied "10 per cent," the politician jokingly remarked that he could arrange a better proposition with another agent.

Upon reaching his home ten minutes later the politician received a telephone call allegedly from the first agent. The voice said:

"You've been sticking your nose in my racket. I'm in this thing to stay and I'm telling you to lay off or they'll find your body in Watuppa Lake."

With all this furore revolving about the pool racket I decided it might be worth while looking into it and I came across some mighty interesting detail. The game is worked as a regular business proposition in Fall River just as the "two-bits and sawbuck" system applies to the rum racket.

$2700 DAILY "TAKE"

There is a bag-man who steps in at a certain spot each Monday morning to look over the tally sheets recording the sales made during the week. The bag-man extracts 10 per cent of the net, that is, if the "take" of the agent, which usually runs about $2700 per day, is figured as a base, the "buy" or prize awards are deducted and the bag-man collects 10 per cent of the remainder.

The three local agents carry all the pinys except those over five cents. The big bets are turned over to a Boston man, who is one of the big shot operators with plenty of funds to pay off the biggest "hits."

QUERIES AND REPLIES

Commander Foote — While we're on the subject of ferries I thought it interesting to note that Sergt. "Jim" Ryan was moved from Middleboro about the same time Corp. Thompson was shifted from Freetown. Just before that, you may remember, Sergt. Ryan gave Corp. Thompson a lift when he kicked in the doors of that hot gambling joint in Westport.

W., Providence—I don't think I'd have gotten anywhere without your help.

E., Fall River—I'm sure you feel there's nothing personal in what I mentioned.

C., Tiverton—That's a whale of a story about "Paul Revere" swimming through the Flint when a land lands at Westport. Hope I'll have a chance to use it soon.

Jim, Providence—I met that fellow yesterday. He was very helpful and gave me a line on the political situation which I'm using within a day or two.

J., Boston—I'm going to have a lot of fun with that guy when I get back to Boston. It had to come sooner or later, didn't it?

FILMS ABOUT GIRLS, ABOUT BOYS, TOO, AND FREAKS

By GILBERT SELDES

Friends who insisted in Paris that I must see a German film called "Maedchen in Uniform," a picture about a school girl crush, assured me that it was barred in the United States, and assured me, with some indignation, that our censorship was a shame. That our censorship is a shame, I freely admit; but "Maedchen in Uniform" has not suffered from it. In New York State, at least, the picture is to be shown. It is a good film, cast to perfection, well directed, with a theme which is new neither to psychologists nor to school girls, but new to the pictures. It tells, movingly and decently, the story of an orphan who is sent to a girls' school and, like most of the other pupils, develops a crush on the nicest of the teachers. The hard heart of the head mistress almost brings about a suicide; the soft heart of the movie director saves the day. It is quite possible that ignorance or deliberate malice can make this film more important than it really is by inflating the subject and insisting on taking it into the field of pathology. But in itself it is thoughtful and decent.

GILBERT SELDES

Films about children have come out from Germany to conquer France. In addition to this one there is a comedy called "Emil and the Detectives," which is a great success. It is, fundamentally, a burlesque of the detective and gangster film, played almost entirely by boys and girls 10 to 16 years old. Emil is Sherlock Holmes, one of his friends is still in the stage of "The Last of the Mohicans"; others are police headquarters men. The episodes in which they trap a thief are childlike and humorous versions of the usual detective romance. The whole effect is charming.

Children in Horror Film

Still another German film dealing with children—but only in part—is called "M" (or "Murder"), and is based on the mass murders of Duesseldorf a few years ago. Here is a bold and terrible theme, and you may be sure that the film is constantly mentioned as the sort of thing the American film industry will never attempt; it is also overpraised purely as a film. For part of it no praise can be too high—the parts in which the terror of a great city is disclosed to you and the part in which the horrible murderer is shown wandering about the streets, looking for victims, whistling the same bars of music every time the lust to kill overtakes him. The killing is shown, but once you see the man walk away with a child and, later, the child's balloon is shown entangled in telephone wires—a superb effect. The film goes completely to pieces at the end when the murderer is caught and tried by "the underworld"—a pure piece of nonsense for the movie trade.

Coming home, I went directly to see "Freaks" Tod Browning's film about "the queer people," a follower in the talkies of his strange silent picture, "The Unholy Three." Now, "Freaks" is not only as terrifying as "M," it is a better film. It moves more steadily to its appointed end; it creates such a feeling of uneasiness in you, it fascinates and repels you so subtly that you shift from unhappiness at the sight of monstrous deformities to [illegible] of rare and beautiful human beings. The story of the dwarf who [illegible] beautiful woman and who [illegible] poisoned by her [illegible] good [illegible] revenge of all the Freaks who [illegible] her one of them, is a masterpiece of horror.

American Movies Gain Prestige

Once only Mr. Browning makes a mistake. The movie begins with a crowd looking into a pit, women shrink back and cry out in horror. "She was once beautiful . . ." says the guide, and then the film undertakes to explain how she became the repulsive object which the people on the screen have seen, but which you have not seen. At the end Mr. Browning chose to show you the dreadful object—and lost a great deal of his effect. What he wanted you to believe was that the little people had created an unnameable horror. What he shows you is a woman who has become a sort of bird. It isn't nearly as repellant as some of the actual freaks you have seen and it is obviously a fake. The unseen is always more terrifying than the seen.

I do not know how successful "Freaks" has been at the box office, but its appearance, under the name of one of the great companies, in some of the biggest theaters in New York, is a good sign. There are other good signs in the heaven of the movies. One is the current tendency of the pictures to kid themselves a little, another is their absorption, at the moment, with political themes. I know that in each case the inspiration came from the outside, and as soon as one producer heard that another was going to do such-and-such a film, he decided to do one himself. Nevertheless, the pictures are bringing in something more interesting to the adult intelligence than the saga of sex-appeal.

"Freaks" is distinguished because it hasn't any star and because the love interest of the chief characters is not romantic. There is a secondary love story connecting the two decent examples of normal humanity, but this is kept rigorously in its place. For the rest, love is treated brutally, as a cause of mean actions, as a hurt to human dignity. The excellent James Cagney used to push women in the face, but romantic love survived these little manifestations of the dominant male. In "Freaks" the hardness is not on the surface, but deep in the heart. I hope it has a great success and I hope that Tod Browning, who has been an interesting director for years, will continue

CANADA AGREES WITH BRITAIN ON RUSSIA

By M. GRATTAN O'LEARY
Noted Journalist and Political Analyst.

(Copyright 1932 Universal Service, Inc.)

Ottawa, Ont., Aug 19 (US)—Ending the deadlock which threatened the imperial trade conference with failure, Great Britain and Canada last night reached a preferential tariff agreement and settled their battle over Soviet Russia.

Announcement of the agreement was made by Premier R. B. Bennett of Canada after a day of almost continuous wrangling during which the British delegation sent the Canadian premier with a virtual ultimatum. Russian "dumping" of wheat and lumber in Great Britain was the stumbling block.

The terms of the final agreement, which is expected to hamper American trade with Canada somewhat but not as seriously as had been expected are to be announced at a plenary session of the imperial conference late today or tomorrow morning.

The entire Canadian cabinet was in secret session with the British delegation for several hours last night before Premier Bennett emerged and told newspaper correspondents that the agreement had been concluded.

Britain's ultimatum was that unless its final offer with regard to Russia was accepted, the British delegation would ignore Canada and conclude separate agreements with Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and India, and then depart for home.

The final offer was as follows:

"The British government will take such legislative and administrative action as may be necessary to prevent trade practices of any form or by any country that might destroy the value of preferential tariffs."

Man Fatally Injured While Changing Tire

Worcester, Aug. 19—William F. Mitchell, Jr., 25, son of Dr. William F. Mitchell of Greendale ave., Needham Heights, died at City Hospital today from injuries he received last night in Oxford. Mitchell, police said, had stopped to change a tire when he was struck by the automobile of Ransom S. Thompson of Litchfield, Ct. Thompson was held on a charge of manslaughter.

PERFECT CHORINE TO WED

Harry Rosenthal, well known Broadway orchestra leader who took a leading part in the comedy "June Moon," expresses his sentiments in gifted fashion to Miss Marjory La Voe, known as the "perfect chorus girl," whom he is to marry. The engagement comes as the culmination of a three-year romance and it is hoped that Mayor Walker will be able to perform the wedding ceremony soon after Labor Day. Miss La Voe is being domestic while her fiance plays the piano. (International News Photos.)

New Steamer to Be Put in Cape Service

An excursion steamer with a passenger capacity of at least 2000 and with from 250 to 300 state rooms will be added to the fleet of the Nantasket Steamboat Co. to accommodate excursionists on the Cape Cod canal sight-seeing trips, it was announced yesterday by Frederic L. Lane, treasurer and general manager. The new vessel will be ready for next season's business, with arrangements made for a two-hour shore stopover at the new pier being built, and affording a nine-hour trip.

Legion Night in Quincy on Sunday

American Legion night will be sponsored at the new acoustic band shell at Merrymount Park, Quincy, Sunday, by Wollaston Post 268 Band, with Louis Cipullo conducting a program of popular music.

At intermission the post drill team, which won second honors at the Lawrence convention, will stage an exhibition drill.

The series of concerts will be under the direction of the Quincy park board.

'THE GREEN PASTURES' SURE OF WELCOME HERE AFTER TWO YEAR ROAD TOUR

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

WHEN "THE GREEN PASTURES" OPENS at the Colonial Theater, September 5, it will be a little more than two years and six months since the play's triumphant opening in New York. It reaches Boston only after it has been almost everywhere else, but better late than never. The news that the advance staff has arrived and is busy is welcome.

PROF. ROGERS

"The Green Pastures" was one of the "naturals" of the theater and those naturals have not been so common of late years. The reason for its success is a little difficult to figure out. It is true that plays on religious subjects drawn from the Bible have a habit of being successful. One remembers "The Shepherd King" and "Joseph and His Brethren" on the stage; "Ben Hur" on both stage and screen, and "The King of Kings" on the screen. It is true that all these were elaborately sensational and romantic presentations, not unlike that old classic of melodrama "The Sign of the Cross" which De Mille is planning to revive.

There is nothing of such bow-wow melodrama in "The Green Pastures," yet in the main it sticks pretty close to the Old Testament, as seen through the eyes of a simple, back-country, colored preacher who is teaching a class of pickaninnies. By the way, what can be done about the Sunday school children in Boston? The law about children in the theater has in the past cheated us out of many an important production, such as Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird" and Josephine Peabody Marks' "The Piper," both of which required large numbers of children.

Success Has Aroused No Protest

Although the story of Adam, Cain and his Gal, and Moses, as presented in the play, is both quaint and funny, the most astonishing fact about the success of the play is that it has aroused no protest. There was a time, I imagine, when people might have objected rather strongly to certain scenes and speeches. Indeed, if I am correctly informed, the King's Reader of Plays in England refused to lift the ban which exists over there on all plays which derive from biblical material.

Probably that was just as well! England could not possibly have any first hand knowledge of the Southern Negro, his spirituals, and his highly naive and imaginative conceptions of the Bible. The English idea of the Negro is still based, so far as I know, on the old-time minstrel, who has become acclimated anew on the beaches of the south coast. John Drinkwater's conception of the old colored slave in his "Abraham Lincoln" presented us with a dialect that has not been used over here since Harriet Beecher Stowe's rather elementary phonetics.

But the American reading public has been brought up on Uncle Remus and knows how the Negro imagination works. Not a one of us but is familiar with the spirituals, both the old genuine camp-meeting songs and the newer imitations. A multitudinous literature has familiarized us with the primitive Negro imagination in its rich and grotesque flower. And of late years the Negro intellectuals and artists of Harlem, with the aid of such interested persons as Carl Van Vechten, have taught us what their people are doing in letters and the arts. The American, then, was probably disposed in advance to welcome a sympathetic and imaginative portrayal of the subject.

"De Lawd" Enhances Poetry of Play

For Marc Connelly's writing of Roark Bradford's material was, as the critics unanimously agreed, not merely sympathetic and imaginative but tender and poetic. The poetry was, of course, greatly enhanced by the celebrated portrayal of "De Lawd" by Richard B. Harrison, who has played the part more than 1000 times. But the chief credit must be given to Connelly himself.

In the old days when the brilliant team of Kaufmann and Connelly was writing "Dulcy" and "To the Ladies" and "Beggar on Horseback," pieces in which keen, satiric wit and uproarious burlesque blended with delicate comedy and touching emotion, I, for one, was curious to know to which of the two, the Irishman or the Jew, should be credited the satire and the pathos. Then the team split up, amicably so far as I know, and we found out.

It was Kaufmann who wrote "The Butter and Egg Man" and "Once in a Lifetime" and had a finger at least in "Of Thee I Sing," all sharply acid pieces of satiric buffoonery. And it was Connelly who wrote "The Wisdom Tooth," a failure but an exceptionally imaginative and interesting failure and then won the Pulitzer Prize hands down with the poetry and pathos of "The Green Pastures."

I hope that the coming of the piece to Boston will arouse interest in the volumes of sketches from which Connelly found his inspiration. The major part of the play is his own, but Bradford's contribution lies in his knowledge of the character of the Southern Negro and of the way he has told stories in religious matter. "Old Man Adam and His Children" and "King David and the Philistine Boys" make good reading in the Uncle Remus Tradition.

Stage Successes in Short Runs Here

It is to be hoped that the management, in its haste to skim the cream off the road, will give not only Boston but New England as a whole the opportunity to see "The Green Pastures." Boston can nearly always get eight or ten weeks on a cheap, popular farce or melodrama, but several of the most important of recent theatrical successes have been allowed to stop here for only a week or two, barely time for the non-habitual theater goer to find out that the attraction is in town. It has always been a matter of surprise to me that the most important of the previous season's successes should be so often rushed into Boston around Labor Day, when the theater-going society people are far away from town, when the theater-supporting colleges are not yet open, and when most people are still broke from their vacation.

The worst fault of theatrical companies which come to Boston after a long run elsewhere is jadedness and let-down, due largely to lack of rehearsal. Let us hope that for the sake of the piece itself, the company that has already played more than 1000 performances will be rehearsed within an inch of its life, will be up on its toes, supplementing the natural zest and gusto of its race with that technical polish without which natural talent is useless, so that everybody may feel the proper thrill when the Archangel Gabriel shoulders his way down through the thronging cherubim, shouting

BOSTON'S SKYLINE TODAY -:- A BIT OF THE WATERFRONT

Looking back at the waterfront from a ferryboat bound from Rowes Wharf to East Boston, one gets this view. Harry Simard, a staff photographer, wanted to show you the Boston skyline with the new postoffice building in the cluster. Look out New York—our skyline is coming along fast. In the foreground is Rowes Wharf, beside which you can see two of the Nantasket Steamboat Co.'s boats. Further along is the S. S. Mayflower, of the Nantasket Line. Then two of the Eastern Steamship Lines boats, the S. S. Boston and the S. S. Evangeline on the right. Over at the left in the background is the United Shoe Machinery Building. You also see the Second National Bank of Boston, at 111 Franklin st., and the Custom House.

NEW UPROAR ENLIVENS M'KNIGHT LOAN FIGHT

BANKER HAD 2 EMPLOYES IN LAND FIRM

Attorneys Clash as the Master Delves for Facts; $14,000 Lent on $8400 Lot

The Medford Trust Co. hearing developed another uproar today with clashes between attorneys over evidence.

The somewhat complicated method of disposal of properties upon which the bank had foreclosed was the subject of interrogation leading up to the cash sale hearing was resumed before Charles W. Blood, master on Bank Commissioner Guy's bill seeking to hold President Edwin T. McKnight Mrs. McKnight and 23 directors individually responsible for the bank's losses.

'DUMMIES' FOR McKNIGHT

James D. Dennison, retired Medford grocer, defendant director, was on the witness stand. He admitted that frequently the Reserve Security Co. took over foreclosed property from the bank and that he had learned the company was composed of Emma Rood and Vera Stanton, employes of McKnight.

He knew the books of the company were kept in McKnight's offices and that the office collected the rents, he said.

"Did you, as director, ask for any accounting as to the properties held by the Reserve Security Co?" asked Robert T. Bushnell, counsel for the bank commissioner.

OFTEN TRANSFERRED

Dennison's lawyer, James Lewis, agreed up with an objection.

"Why?" asked Blood.

"It's an unusual procedure," said Lewis.

"Well," commented the master, "it was an unusual company, wasn't it?"

Dennis then answered and said he hadn't asked for any accounting, that the thought the business was taken care of by the clearing department.

There was some testimony here that certain Haverhill property had been turned over to the Reserve and by the Reserve to the Royal Holding Co., and later to the bank again.

IN WORDY CLASH

Blood asked for an explanation of this procedure and George H. Lacy, counsel for the Leverings, said he had it in mind that Bushnell had shut off the witness before he could explain. Blood, however, ruled Dennison had finished answer and Bushnell, addressing Lacy, asked:

"Why don't you answer the

$25 FINE GIVEN OWNER OF 'PILL-BOX'

O'Meara Assessed for Storing Inflammable Liquids in Place Where the Still Was Found

Although declared by his counsel to be the "goat" in the case, Henry J. O'Meara of Brookline, president and treasurer of the Massachusetts Degreasing Co., was fined $25 today in Woburn court on a charge of keeping and storing inflammable fluids without a permit.

The charge was made in connection with the famous "pill-box" raids on the plant in Montvale ave., Woburn, which O'Meara testified today had been leased last spring to the Massachusetts Refineries, Inc.

O'Meara appealed the fine imposed by Judge Jesse W. Morton and was held in $300 for superior court.

Samples of the fluid seized in the plant before prohibition agents succeeded in gaining entrance to the "pill-box" where a still was declared to have been found, contained ether, alcohol, sulphuric acid and a blue dye, it was testified by Perlin L. Chartier, a state chemist.

Chartier said the fluid was highly volatile and inflammable and would flash at a temperature of 85 degrees Fahrenheit. One sample flashed in the laboratory, he said.

When the dry agents finally gained entrance to the pill box, they found 23 empty drums declared to have contained the same substance, but O'Meara testified he did not know who had emptied them.

Arguing for acquittal, former Asst. U. S. Dist. Atty. Hubert Thompson declared that O'Meara was being used as the "goat" in the proceedings and that the lease-holding corporation should have been made the defendant.

LOCAL SURGEON GOING TO CHINA

Ending a vacation taken after weeks of work as an operating surgeon in China during the warfare last spring, Dr. Hugh Laughlin Robinson, son of the Rev. Charles F. Robinson of Wellesley, will leave San Francisco to return to China on August 26.

Dr. Robinson is head of the medical unit at Christian Hospital in Lintsing, the only medical unit in an area 60 miles in length. This hospital, he declares, serves at least 1,000,000 persons, many of whom are Mohammedans.

The surgeon, who has been spending his vacation in Boston and Wellesley, was graduated from Harvard Medical School in 1922.

MAN UNHURT IN 3-STORY FALL

A little thing like a three-story plunge down an elevator shaft doesn't bother Warren Foster, 19, of 908 Massachusetts ave., Back Bay.

Foster stepped into the shaft at the third floor of the Dexter building, 453 Washington st., today, thinking he was stepping into the elevator.

He picked himself up in the well, brushed off his clothes, scrutinized a little cut on the little finger of his right hand, and walked into Washington st. to tell Patrolman Joseph Snyder about it. Then he went home to rest his shaken insides.

Guards on Trucks Delivering Flour

A guard of four men were placed on a truck delivering government flour to the poor of Quincy as a result of outbreaks on the previous day when city employes were attacked by a crowd of 50 at Quincy Point, who demanded they be given portions of the flour.

Hultman Praises Three Patrolmen

Three patrolmen have been commended by Police Commissioner Hultman. Patrolman Laurence J. McNamara of Back Bay station was lauded for his work in reviving Miss Lillian Gay of St. Botolph st., who had attempted suicide, and Patrolmen George C. Wardrop and Henry T. Doherty of the Fields Corner station for rescue of Louis Pesti of Pearl st., Dorchester, during a fire at his home.

BLONDIE OF THE FOLLIES

From Which M-G-M Has Made a Glamorous Picture Starring Marion Davies

By Frances Marion

"WHAT'S THE IDEA?"

"He hates them," Blondie said, simply, and hurried to her father.

"What's the matter? . . . Are you the doctor?" asked Blondie, and the doctor nodded.

"He hasn't seemed well for a long time," a man in his shirt sleeves spoke up. "He collapsed suddenly and fell off his chair—he struck his head—I think he's just stunned . . ."

Blondie fell on her knees beside her father. She rubbed his hands gently, and called softly, "Pa! Pa!"

The doctor turned to Lurline.

"Are you a daughter, too?"

"No—can't you get him to a hospital?" Lurline asked, excitedly.

"I wouldn't move him—it's not his head—that's just a scalp wound." Then he whispered in her ear, "It's a heart attack."

Failing to get any recognition from her father, Blondie was getting hysterical.

"Pa—Pa, it's Blondie!" she called, but there was no response from the stricken man. Blondie looked around wildly at the little group. "Oh, can't you do something?—What are you standing around for?.. Pa!" she moaned. Lurline bent over her gently.

"The doctor says it's his heart!"

"Oh—Oh!" exclaimed Blondie, as she put her arms about her father.

"Don't hold him so tightly!" admonished the doctor, as he reached for the patient's pulse.

"Pa, speak to me!" Blondie cried out suddenly.

As the doctor released her father's wrist he turned away, shaking his head hopelessly. When Lurline saw the doctor's look she dropped down beside Blondie.

BLONDIE WAITED

"Blondie! . . Blondie!"

"Get away!" said Blondie, and frantically she turned to her father, "Pa!—Pa! This is Blondie, open your eyes—look at me—Pa, this is Blondie!"

For an instant she waited, and almost as if in obedience to her plea, her father's eyes fluttered open. The white, drawn, agonized face glowed for a second with a smile. His eyes turned up and slowly closed again. Pa McClune, very, very tired, went to sleep.

Panic-stricken, Blondie looked around at the little group. Can't you do something" she begged again.

"I'm afraid not now . . . "said the doctor, gently.

"He didn't even speak—Pa!" said Blondie, in a daze. Pleadingly she looked up at the office manager. "Did he ask for me"

"Yes . . . at once . . . I couldn't find you . . . the family were out motoring, they said—we found a newspaper clipping with your address on it in his desk—he kept calling for you until he became exhausted."

"What did he say? . . . What did he say?"

"I took it down," said a stenographer, as he reached for her notebook. "He kept calling 'Blondie . . . Blondie!' That's your name, isn't it? He said: 'Little Blondie, hurry, Pa wants you—don't stay away from me now . . . little Blondie.' That's just what he said because I took it down . . . I thought he was going then . . ."

Blondie sat perfectly still, gently petting her father's hand, seemingly unable to speak. Then suddenly she buried her face in her father's lap and burst into tears.

"I'm here, Pa! . . . Blondie's here, Pa . . ." came her muffled sobbing voice. "To late! . . . Too late! . . ."

FUNERAL OVER

The first funeral in the McClune family was over and the surviving members had returned from the cemetery. The little flat was depressed with the hush that always follows such events, and everybody talked in subdued tones.

"I think the blanket of violets that Mr. Pratt sent was the most beautiful floral creation I've ever seen," exclaimed Pete. ". . . It touched me . . . and he's never met Pa, never laid eyes on him."

Blondie turned on him with quick irritation. "Oh, stop it please!"

Pete adjusted the crepe band on the sleeve of his checkered coat and ignored the request. ". . . and why you instructed its removal from the casket is beyond me!"

"Why? . . . Why? . . . Blondie started to retort, but Gert cut in.

"Well, what's beyond me—if you ask, and you haven't—I think you're out of your mind, Blondie, giving up Mr. Pratt, and your apartment, and your limousine, just because poor old Pa died."

"I agree with you, Mrs. Slatterly," said Lurline.

"Oh, you do, Miss . . . ." replied Gert, imitating her grandly. ". . . come out of it, Lottie—this is Gert!"

"Yes . . . and I poked you in the nose once for. . ."

"You did. . . ."

"Yes, I did . . ." and Lurline turned away as Blondie stared at them dully.

TRYING TO COMFORT HER

Blondie walked over to her mother, who was dabbing a crumpled handkerchief to her reddened

Western Romance

THERE IS A LITTLE STIR at Dublin, New Hampshire, over the arrival of Mr. and Mrs Ronald de L. Kirkbride from Santa Barbara, California. They were married two years ago when Katrina was only 17 . . . she was the daughter of the William S. Spauldings of Boston and Ronald was only 19 . . . he the son of the William H. Kirkbrides of California and London.

• • •

THIS ROMANCE BLOSSOMED in the West when the Spauldings were visiting in Santa Barbara . . . they were returning to present their beautiful daughter to society, when she decided to get married, much to the surprise of everyone. It was a perfect match in every way, youth, beauty, and much wealth on both sides of the family.

Pearson-Sears Ceremony on Cape Today

The wedding of Miss Margaret Bacchus Sears, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Selden M Sears of Canton, to Mr. Gray Waite Peirce, son of Mrs. Henry G. Pearson of Highland ave., Fitchburg, is being solemnized this afternoon at Barnstable. Amid banks of white gladioli, set off with green cedar trees, they will plight their troth before the large old fireplace in the house of the Blue Tavern Inn where the atmosphere of old Colonial days is preserved in its architecture and furnishings. A reception follows at the inn.

Ivory Satin Gown

The bride is being given away by her father, and Dr John C Wingett is officiate. She selected a beautiful gown of alencon lace and ivory satin with a train to match, and is wearing a turban cap with veil attached. She is carrying a bouquet of lilies of the valley and gardenias. Her maid of honor, Miss Marjorie Jean Welsh, of New Bedford, is wearing a gown of white chalk crepe with a little jacket to match, and the sleeves trimmed with handmade flowers. Her turban will be trimmed with flowers to match the sleeves.

The three bridesmaids, Miss Perry Place of New York City, Miss Barbara Scott of Dedham, and Miss Barbara Taylor of Melrose, all wearing gowns like the maid of honor, with bouquets of summer flowers.

The bride's mother's gown is of Fuchsia crepe with a velvet hat to match, while Mrs. Pearson is attired in a charming gown of brown lace and brown hat.

Entertained

Mr. Marshall W. Farrest of Lowell is officiating as best man, and the four ushers are Mr Nathan W. Pearson, Mr. Alfred K. Pearson, both of Gardner, and relatives of the bridegroom; Mr. Robert B. Bryant of Gardner, and Mr. Frank H. Eastman, Jr., of Milton.

A luncheon for the wedding party was given yesterday at Dennis, followed by a dinner.

The bride will depart in a costume of Boudeau red with hat and gloves to match, for a cruise on the Orient.

Kathryn McElroy to Wed on Aug. 27

Miss Kathryn Mary McElroy daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Edward McElroy of Brookline, has chosen her sister, Miss Margaret McElroy, to act as maid of honor at her wedding to William Arthur Reilly of Jamaica Plain on Saturday, Aug. 27, in St. Mary's Church, in Brookline.

Mr. Reilly is the son of Dr. and Mrs. James A. Reilly of Jamaica Plain, and is chairman of the Boston school committee.

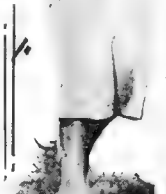
A cast of more than 30 members of Falmouth young residents and of the summer Colony have been rehearsing several spectacular tableaux, depicting scenes from various operas to be given with musical settings, under the direction of Mr C. Hessler Capron, who directed the water pageant at Newton last June.

Mrs. M. H. Gulesian, composer and pianist of Boston, Mrs. Walter W. Winship of Winchester, and Miss Carolyn McClellan of Newtonville are taking the leading parts.



MISS POLLY MOORE appeared in a pale blue and horizontally stripped costume.

Gala Benefit at Falmouth

Among the many entertainments that have been staged from time to time with the object of raising funds for the benefit of unemployed people throughout this year, none can surpass the elaborate affair to take place this evening for the benefit of the Falmouth Community Council, which is making heroic efforts to help their locality, of which Dr. Lewis C. Weeks is president.

The event takes the form of an entertainment at Falmouth, the summer estate of Mr. and Mrs. John F Capron of Newton Center entitled "The Color Box Cabaret."

On the north lawn of the estate a stage of huge proportions has been set up and has been covered with a wax dancing floor large enough to accommodate as many as 600 couples. Tables and seating arrangements are on the same scale, and will provide room for well over a thousand guests. The gardens have been elaborately decorated with Japanese lanterns.

MRS. BANCROFT MRS. COX

MRS HUGH BANCROFT, in pale green chiffon, and Mrs. William Cox, the former Jessie Bissell, in white skirt and hat and green pepper jacket, are hostesses to their many friends during the show.

With Leaders at Resorts

ONE OF THE MOST ATTRACTIVE summer resorts in the vicinity of Portland, Me., is Falmouth Foreside. Nestled among the pines on the shores of Casco Bay it is altogether charming. In fact, many of Portland's socially prominent vacation there. Like many other resorts, the social life of Falmouth Foreside centers around the Country Club. People from hereabouts noted among the dancers there were Miss Jane Wheeler of Chestnut Hill, Miss Isabel Murphy, Miss Caroline Cosby and Miss Jean Clapp of Brookline, Miss Ann Clifford of Fitchburg, Mr. and Mrs. Olcott Payson (Ann Barton), Mr. Roger Stone of Watertown and Mr. Philip J Deering of Boston. Jimmie Childs of York Harbor drove up with a party of friends.

MRS. RICHARD A. A MARTIN, known to her friends as "Pat," of Myrtle st., Beacon Hill, is spending the month of August with her mother, Mrs. Frank Adelbert Hall, at Scituate. Pat and Dick Martin have one of the most distinctive apartments on Beacon Hill and Pat is certainly one of the best-dressed young matrons in this city. We saw her floor by the other night in a lovely white crepe evening gown, all subtle fullness and pin tucks giving a diagonal effect. A white scarf fluttered from one shoulder.

MR. AND MRS. DONALD BATES LAWSON of Cambridge have returned from Maine and have left for an extended stay in the Berkshires with Mrs. Lawson's mother, Mrs. C. R. Mayers. Miss Alice Mayers lived at the Barbizon in New York last winter but we hope she will return to Boston this coming season.

ONE OF THE MOST DELIGHTFUL and colorful events on the Maine social calendar was the tea dance for which Mr. and Mrs. George Ferguson of Brookline so generously opened their beautiful estate, Dunslawn, at Ogunquit. Miss Gloria Braggiotti, radiant society favorite and dancer of renown, had charge of the lucky number and spot dance, for which there were prizes. Mrs. Smith, charming in cool white crepe, was assisted by her stunning daughter, Miss Stano Braggiotti. Mrs Braggiotti wore a smart striped afternoon dress. Miss Barbara Smith had charge of the busy waitresses. The beneficiary, the Ogunquit Village Improvement Association, is particularly grateful.

MRS JOHN E. KENNEDY (Mary Morrison) of Boston and Magnolia is in London with her very curly-headed daughter, Ann, visiting her aunt. You will remember that following her debut in Boston Mrs. Kennedy made her bow before the King and Queen in the Court of St James . . . perhaps little Ann is now practising her curtsy for some very future date.

WE HAD A CARD POSTmarked Scotland from Miss Dorothy May of Jamaica Plain. Miss May is taking the North Cape cruise on the S. S. France and is expected back Aug. 28.

MRS. CHARLES JONES OF Cohasset is giving a dinner tonight for forty out-of-town guests that are staying in the district during the Horse show. The guests will go on to the ball that is taking place at the Cohasset Golf Club for the visitors.

AMONG THE RECENT ARRIVALS at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York city, from Boston, we note that of Mrs. Andrew N. Winslow, Jr., of Chestnut st.

PLANS ARE BEING MADE for the Junior League Welfare conference which will take place in October at the Junior League building. These, too, are the days of sweet frivolity and "I'm we." And speaking of frivolity—there is lovely Miss Anne Dick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Evans Dick of Magnolia and Boston. She was seen of late at the Magnolia theater, charming in her metal brocade wrap. Her evening dress was of figured metal and being a blonde, she looked radiant in this gorgeous attire.

• • •

Miss Dick has a magnificent carriage and is altogether charming and delightful. She knows how to make frivolity and art and is a delight to those who see her and after all, is there anything nicer than being able to please those about us; even if it is in so small a way as dress?

• • •

Enchanting

THEN HAVE YOU NOTICED how lovely Miss Barbara Wendell looked Saturday night at the Oceanside theater, where she acted in the capacity of usher? Miss Wendell is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs Barratt Wendell of Chicago and the North Shore and is one of those fortunate persons who always look enchanting. She is especially lovely in her midnight blue chiffon with the crossed ribbons in front and a sash tied in a big bow at her slender waist of crimson taffeta with deep purple tints. The whole gown is most striking and effective and Miss Wendell is one who can wear such a glorious evening gown and look strikingly beautiful in it. Yes, indeed, where the mirror of frivolity is held up to the lovely Miss Wendell the reflection is one that not only catches the eye but also holds it charmed with the effect.

At Cohasset

On the first day of the Cohasset Horse Show the Misses Katherine and Elizabeth Washburn, the little blonde daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Washburn, dressed in tanned "Jodpurs" and smart little brown tweed coats, both rode their ponies very well and conducted themselves with great finesse in the ring.

• • •

AMONG THOSE PRESENT were Mrs. Andrew Washburn, in a cool-looking white silk sport dress, with a becoming little white silk hat.

• • •

MRS. WILLIAM COX LOOKED most charming in a white rajah skirt with a little shaded green sweater coat, very smart, and topped off with a saucy little white beret that had a band of green over the top—Mrs. Cox is in charge of the tea-house, brightly furnished with bright red furniture and red and white checked curtains. The proceeds from the tearoom and the gift shop are to go to the Sunlight Hospital and the Social Service League of Cohasset.

MRS. WILLIAM COX HAS as house guests Mrs. Moore and Miss Pauline, who looked very cute in a blue and white sport dress with a very becoming blue hat.

ROUGH SESSION IN STORE FOR THE SIDE-SHOW POLITICIANS

STREET WORKER OFFERS ACTION IF ELECTED

Connor, Ousted From City Job, Finds Candidates Have Troubles, Too

This being a politician isn't proving to be all peaches and cream for Edmund J. Connor, Sr., Cambridge's fighting "unretired retired" street cleaner, who has opened a novel fight for a seat in the State Legislature.

Threats to defeat offers good and not so good have kept Cambridge's latest hero on edge since he announced his intention of entering the race and posing statuesque posing for photographs and planning campaign have kept him as busy as the proverbial bee.

PASS PRICE OF FAME

He was found today by a reporter only after the latter proved that he wasn't a process server, subpoena or an assessor, and with the promise of a campaign button.

"Gosh, but I'm glad that you're not one of those infernal pests who have been bothering me since I started this affair," he stated.

He sat down at a desk here with his head in his hands and groaned.

"See all this junk here. Well some of it is asking me to buy a second hand automobile. One asks me to adopt a baby, and still another wants me to be a companion for a wealthy banker."

SCORES RUSSELL

He paused and then cried out indignantly. It was apparent he was fed up with the campaign.

"Throw this junk away. I'm a good Democrat," he said.

Connor, [illegible] reopened his speeches as well [illegible]

"I want to tell the people what I think of this tax rate that Mayor Russell has announced. I think that it's outrageous the way it has jumped to such an amount. The way the tax rate is, they better start building bigger poorhouses because that's where all the property owners are going to be before long if this tax jumps any higher.

"I believe that we ought to have a tax rate that would stay the same at all times. I have an idea that Mayor Russell is trying to be smart. I think that next year Russell will announce that the tax has dropped a couple of dollars so he will get the voters to believe that he is a good time charlie. His plan is as shallow as the water in the bath tub.

AIMS "POSE"

"Just wait until I hit Beacon Hill. Boy, won't I show a few of these side-show "pols" a few things. A lot of these fellows think that I have given up hopes of getting my job back. Well they're wrong. I'm going to take that case to the highest court in the state.

"They've tried to scare me by threats, they've sent around rumors that I've withdrawn from the race and I've been told they're ready to offer a good bit of money for me to quit. I said it before and I say it again, I'm in this fight until the last vote is counted.

"One of my opponents has offered to be my attorney and to help me in my fight to get me back my job. I don't want his help. Once upon a time I heard a saying that went something like this: Fear the Greeks when they bring gifts. Well, that fits this guy's case.

SURE OF VOTES

"I'm only seeking for the support of the voters and I know that I'm going to get it."

His wife entered the room at this point and whispered in his ear.

"Well," he said, as he arose from his chair, "I've got to be going along. My campaign committee has called a meeting."

$14,000 ON $8400 LOT

Dennison, who became a director after he had got a loan of $30,000 from the savings department, testified with regard to the Leominster Theater for which the bank advanced loans that McKnight had told him it would be sold when it was completed.

William N. Curtis, the first witness today, testified that as a director he was unaware a West Roxbury lot on which the bank lent $14,000 was assessed for only $8400. Nor did he see anything mysterious in an $8000 bonus paid by a man Griffin on a loan of $40,000.

THEY CAN'T FIND EVEN ONE PROHIBITION REFORMED

NATION-WIDE SEARCH FOR THE BENEFICIARIES OF THE TWENTY-FOUR BILLION DOLLAR EXPERIMENT

After a tour of 13,000 miles, prohibition's Diogenes has arrived in Boston to continue his quest for even one man who has reformed by the prohibition laws. High honors and fame await such an individual—if there be such—and his name will go down in history as the only one of his kind in the world, a man who has made good at a cost of billions of dollars. Diogenes in this instance is personified by the Prohibition Research Committee. The members shown, left to right, are Ernest W. Brookland, Jr., University of Pennsylvania; Russell G. Salmon, Rensselaer Polytechnic; Robert Nicholson, Catholic University, Washington; J. Ward Ryan, Harvard, and Paul Morris, director of the search. They are shown in the coach in which they have toured the country. (Staff photo.)

GANG HELD FOR EXTORTION

Believed to be extorting [illegible] terrified Saul Zandlon an automobile dealer for several days with threats of violence five [illegible] men were taken into custody by police as they attempted to secure more money from Zandlon at his garage at 301 Blue Hill ave, Dorchester.

Zandlon told police the men came to his garage Tuesday and informed him that they had been engaged to "bump him off," and were to be paid $400. They told him that a friend had intervened and that they would not molest him if he paid $25. He paid the money, he claims.

The men appeared at his home Tuesday night and again threatened him. Zandlon told Capt John E. Driscoll of the Matapan station.

When one of the men entered the garage yesterday and demanded an additional $50 according to Zandlon, he escaped on a pretext and rushed to the station.

Meanwhile an employee notified police by telephone. A squad of police hurried to the garage and arrested five men at gunpoint.

The men gave their names as James Abdella 23 of Shawmut ave., Fred Aboriaiv 20 of Union st, William Hadge, 19 of Shawmut ave, Edward Malouf 1 of Waltham st and Gabriel J. Baker 21 of Laconia st, all of the South End.

"Oh Yeah?" BUT SCIENCE SAYS O.G. IS THE BEST CIGARETTE"

*THE VERDICT OF SCIENCE

This is to certify that in 75 repeated tests made of four leading cigarette brands . . . measuring the heat content of each cigarette by the Calorimeter method . . . it was shown that OLD GOLD is from 112 to 156 B. T. U's. COOLER than the other brands. Careful measurement of the heat of the smoke further confirmed the fact that the smoke of OLD GOLD is definitely cooler.

IT'S PRETTY HARD to duck away from those tireless cigarette ads. Wherever you go, they're apt to float right up alongside of you and whisper their coaxing claim:

"Mine's Milder!" "Fresher!" "Kinder!"

But how about listening to scientific facts, instead of adjectives?

In 75 laboratory tests* of 4 leading cigarettes checked by scientists of two universities, OLD GOLD was found to be the coolest cigarette, and therefore the most delightful in every way.

OLD GOLD won these tests because it is made of the PUREST and choicest tobacco . . . free of all heat-generating flavorings. That's the "why" of "not a cough in a carload." The "why" of OLD GOLD'S greater taste appeal, and throat-ease.

'FAIR IN LOVE AND WAR?' -:- If Married, Of Course It Should Be "Hands Off" -:- By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Loyalty and Friendship in Clash

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX
An Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

AS FAR as other women's husbands are concerned, I hope it's a "hands off" policy. Likewise, girls who take pride in a decent sense of sportsmanship respect each other's rights as to engaged men.

Is it too much to expect other women to stand aside until this and that love affair has crystallized? Or is there a kind of acknowledged competition that is perfectly legitimate, as long as no actual engagement has taken place?

DOZENS OF LETTERS

I get dozens of letters asking me these questions every day in the week. How far may a girl go without doing anything underhand? And is the old adage true—that all is fair in love and war?

My own feeling is that a woman of honor and decency carries loyalty pretty far. She not only doesn't want to stand in the way of a friend's romantic projects, she doesn't even want to seem to be an obstacle to her plans. A woman who is thoroughly "square" doesn't care about having the charge of cribbing her girl friend's young man laid at her door.

We must admit that loyalty to one's girl friend is a good deal easier for instance, when the constant friend has a bad complexion, a spindly figure and is apt to say the wrong thing. But it is for a girl whom men flock around like bees after honey-bearing flowers or for one of those radiant creatures who have only to walk into a room to create a small social revolution.

These reflections are suggested by a letter from May W. who seems to have the peculiar gift of making every man fall in love with her. She has an older sister who I fear is considerably less attractive. This sister was on the point of becoming engaged to a young man whom May came home from school and something immediately happened.

WHAT DID MAY DO?

May's mother is furious. The sister who has been supersedeed weeps and goes 'round with red eyelids. May is held to be the culprit. Even Papa, her devoted ally, looks askance, and May writes to ask how really wicked she has been—because she really couldn't help the young man's falling in love.

No, my dear, you can't help being pretty and attractive, and fatal to men's peace of mind; but you could have been cool to your plainer sister's beau, when you saw how things were going.

Hard and Soft Hearts

DEAR Miss FAIRFAX

I and my girl have quarreled because I praised the action of a certain Philadelphia judge, who refused to send a man to jail because he had stolen food to feed his starving family. She felt that the man who had snatched the groceries for a hungry wife and children should be sent to jail "as an example." Which was right?

STUDENT.

Dear Student: I believe you are both right, perhaps. Be thankful you have had a complete understanding as to your divergent views. Are you afraid to marry one who has heart-beats which are not entirely your own to human suffering? I'd just pass the word needed to find out if he cares more for you than he does for—

FIND ALL-BRAN HAS TWICE THE USABLE IRON IN LIVER

Also Furnishes "Bulk" and Vitamin B to Overcome Common Constipation

Liver is known as a good source of iron for the blood. Now, new tests show Kellogg's All-Bran contains twice as much blood-building iron as an equal amount by weight of beef liver.

But more important still, laboratory experiments show that All-Bran provides "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and Vitamin B to tone the intestinal tract.

This means Kellogg's All-Bran is a fine way to overcome constipation—with the headaches, loss of appetite and energy that so frequently result.

The "bulk" in All-Bran is much like that of lettuce. Inside the body, it absorbs moisture, forming a soft mass, which gently clears the intestines of wastes. Special cooking processes make All-Bran finer, milder, more palatable.

How much better than risking pills and drugs—so often habit-forming. Just eat two tablespoonfuls of All-Bran daily for most types of constipation. It is not habit-forming. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Daily True Story

A Soul In Distress

WHEN J. Johnson Brannigan married the lovely Eileen Persons, all the old ladies who sit at their knitting shook their heads dolefully. The common verdict was that the match was unfortunate.

J. Johnson Brannigan had long passed his prime. Although his step was still springy and his movements chipper, his hair had greyed. Though unmarked by deep furrows, his face nevertheless betrayed the long struggle of the man for money. He had won the battle—and now was ready to enjoy the sweets of life.

So when his penetrating eye fell upon the burnished hair of Eileen and met the steady blue gaze of her orbs—his heart welled with that springtime emotion that here was the reason he had striven so long and arduously.

Eileen had just passed her 20th birthday. She was young, laughter-loving, dance-mad. But her youthful enthusiasm made her all the more appealing to the man who had missed his youth.

Her father was a clerk in a small factory and she was a humble stenographer.

Those who predicted that money and [illegible] right Brannigan would [illegible] husband. He built a home that was the show place of the town. He furnished it grandly with elegance and taste.

RESTLESS AND NERVOUS

In the meantime Eileen had grown restless and nervous and thin. She knew her duties as a loyal and faithful wife. But her heart was where the young couples were—dancing, laughing and romancing. Yes, even romancing. She hardly dared admit it to herself—but wealth and ease could not satisfy the craving of spirit.

Wherever she went there was ruth—taunting her, luring her. Their glances spoke volumes. Often she felt like a traitress, but she could not control her emotions. It was the age-old [illegible] Brannigan [illegible] though she knew that many of those who danced attendance upon her were [illegible] and envied her husband, yet [illegible] merits of her husband; yet she gave them more than a passing thought.

eyes. Mrs. Callahan was silently trying to comfort her, patting her gently on the shoulder.

"I know it won't be easy for you at first, but I'll let you have what I can from my pay out of the show . . ." began Blondie, hoping that her mother would understand.

"How much does that work out to, Blondie?" her mother asked anxiously.

Lurline supplied the answer with a disdainful shrug. "About $80—its a pittance—a positive pittance."

"It's more than I used to get at the store . . ." exclaimed Blondie, quickly.

"We had your Pa then," said her mother. "He got thirty dollars when he worked and you know he never spent anything on himself . . . he'd bring the check home and hand it to me . . . just like that . . . remember, Gert? He was a good man, your Pa!"

"Don't I know he was good," cried Blondie, trying hard to control herself. Then gently, "I'll be good to you, too, Ma. But you'll just have to get along on what I earn—really earn . . ." Blondie stopped as her mother began to cry again. "Ma I have to—can't you see, Ma—I have to do what Pa would want me to do," pleaded Blondie.

JOB IN MOVIES

"Any post now will bring me that letter from Hollywood," said Pete, suddenly, trying to draw attention to himself. "If I land that job for the movies it'll take me off your hands—did I tell you about that, Blondie?"

Blondie deliberately turned her back on him.

"I wrote a swell detective yarn in three days," he boasted. "It's better than Sherlock Holmes, ain't it Gert?"

There was an obvious silence, and the raucous street noises filled the flat. Blondie turned to her mother again.

"Well, that's all there is—I've got to look out for myself—I want to marry one of these days and have kids . . ."

"Well, I've got a couple I'll lend you now," from Gert.

"I charming little cherubs" said Lurline, looking disdainfully at the two ill-kept children screaming for attention.

"I'd like to see a kid of yours!" Gert exclaimed.

"I never will!" replied Lurline, loftily

Blondie ignoring the side chat again laid down her burden on the family

MOVED TO DOOR

"Well, I'm going to live on what I make from the show—that's all, and she moved toward the door.

"You'd better change your mind before somebody else hooks Mr Fratt," warned Lurline

"I don't want to discuss those things here . . ." Blondie replied quickly.

"You're going to work in that show on the day of your Pa's funeral?" asked Ma, surprised

"If Pa were watching—and I think he is—he'd know that what I'm doing is right," Blondie replied.

"Now, that's an insane theory—do you believe in that, Lurline?" asked Pete.

"Part of Blondie's attraction is her eccentricity . . ."

"Blondie's eccentricity! You kill me, Lurline," said Gert

"I will one day!" came back Lurline. Then, turning to Blondie, she said: "Come on, Miss Mc Cline—get your hips out of here."

"Do you think I should write and thank Mr. Fratt on behalf of the family?" asked Pete

"He's been thanked enough," declared Lurline.

"No—please don't . . ." said Blondie, as she kissed her mother lovingly. "Goodbye all!"

"You say your Pa would like you to do what you're doing" Pete said. "Do you think he'd like to see us living from hand to mouth—like we used to?"

"Aw, she's upset now—I know how she feels . . ." declared Gert, as the two girls left the flat, followed by Mrs. Callahan, who never took part in the McClune family discussions.

WANTED THEM HOME

As they reached the stairway Mrs. Callahan whispered

"Blondie's right—I wish you'd do the same, Lottie. I'd like to see you two kids come home and find two nice young men of your own class . . ."

"Mother, mother, mother, mother . . ." said Lurline, very much annoyed. "Goodbye, dear . . . and she kissed her mother hastily.

"Good-by, then, children . . ." Mrs. Callahan called as the girls went down the stairs.

As their car pulled away from the curb Blondie said earnestly.

"I guess you're mother's right about coming down to earth again."

"Mother's always been like that —no vision—no vision at all".

"Remember the first time I came down here with you in the car?"

"Indeed, indeed."

"I certainly envied you"

"Well, you got everything for yourself, didn't you?"

"Yes, everything—and nothing."

"What do you mean, you got nothing?"

"Oh, I want love; I want to be in love."

"I guess we both are, aren't we?"

"Why do you keep bringing up Larry Belmont? Forget him! I have."

BOOKS—AND OTHER THINGS

By Charles Hanson Towne

WITH VELVET TOUCHES

Bruyere's White Crepe de Chine Dress

—SKETCHED IN PARIS—

Hard Work for Men and Women to Be Children Once More

There is something in us all, if we are in any sense of the right stuff, which makes us desire, every so often, to become small boys and girls again. It is, one supposes, a human need, an escape valve to blow off excess steam.

If old Mother Nature can change her mood perpetually, I don't see why frail mortals shouldn't seek an opportunity to alter their mental attitudes. Nothing remains static long—not even the radio.

Near "Shingle Blessedness" up in Connecticut there is a miniature Coney Island, to which the besieged city crowds come by boat during the hot weather, getting a pleasant sail through the Sound from the Battery; and it is fun now and then to go there and watch them enjoy themselves in simple fashion.

There is something pathetic in watching the boys and girls letting themselves go for a few hours and something stimulating, too. The moment their feet touch the dock they seem to do a little dance step. Far away sounds of music catching their ears.

Bands are playing, merry-go-rounds are humming, "barkers" are crying out their various attractions, roller-coasters are climbing and dipping on their perilous tracks, and there are screams of delight from the vaudeville and window-dressers out on a care-free holiday. Here is release from the daily grind. Inhibitions disappear.

Hot dogs are purchased at once. To consume a hot dog in public, in the open air, gives one a strange sense of absolute freedom. A pop-corn ball eaten in public makes one feel like a devil. (No, I didn't say the devil.) Wash it down with a pink lemonade standing nonchalantly before a booth, and soon one imagines that one is again on a Sunday school picnic and only ten years of age.

A ferris wheel with swinging compartments that would make even a sailor seasick—why does such a contraption lure us all? But it does, and I suppose that your thirty-dollars-a-week clerk, sailing high above the pigmies beneath him feels suddenly a superior being, and indulges in a few moments of ecstasy which he could never feel with his weary feet planted on the earth. He is a king for a little while.

Let him enjoy his brief but royal moment.

And there are the bumps to be tried—tiny cars that hold three or four distracted people, twirling them about like tops tossing them helter-skelter against one another, to the accompaniment of loud screams. They sway and cavort and tumble in a confused maze stopped in against accidents.

And they pay thus to be tortured! They count it as fun to be twirled backward and forward, almost torn from their seats. They emerge from their cars like sailors from a transatlantic flight, and receive an ovation from those more timid souls who have not dared to venture on such an exploit. They are flushed or pale, according to their temperament. They pause just an instant, and then determine to buy more tickets and repeat their adventure. Nothing is too delirious for them.

They can stand the roughest handling, and they are proud of their steady heads. No spineless ones among them. They have had too many lasting spiritual hopes to fear these mere temporary physical knocks.

They even allow themselves later to be strapped securely in a barrel and tossed hither and yon down a track. Exhausted, they come back for more happy punishment; but they revel in the admiration they receive. They are daredevils, and there is no form of this sort of "pleasure" which they will forego.

They plunge in little boats through a canal of darkness and gloom, where pale-mache dragons leer at them, and rejoice at those signs in the dimness which indicate an "Emergency Exit." Something terrible might happen here, but it will never happen to them. They are immune.

The girls give piercing shrieks as bending they are frightened to death which they know is a sham, for their boy friends to seize them frantically about the waist.

* * *

One must try the Skee Ball, bending over and getting into a dripping perspiration even on a summer's day. Delighted with their score, the players repeat the game, until nickels vanish like lightning. Most of them have brought their lunch, as they can spend wildly and recklessly on amusements all that might have gone for food. They are out for fun, and, in their American way, they are going to get it.

They have their thirty-cent taken, putting on foolish or self-conscious faces and they shriek with laughter when they are handed to them wee and awful after only a miraculous moment's delay.

* * *

And then when you would think them too tired to do anything else they dance in a pavilion to the latest fox-trots and old-fashioned waltzes and one-steps; and, probably like the little man in Noyes' poem, they have danced two miles before they know it, and are ready to go on for a dozen more.

It makes one breathless to watch them. Their energy is boundless. When the park whistle warns them that within ten minutes they will have to climb aboard for the trip back to the boat, they seem amazed that the time is up.

It has seemed to the shortest possible space. But if you followed them to the Battery, you would hear many of them singing with what breath they have left. Others, who have not done half as much, would be soundly asleep in their decks chairs, resting.

MARK MADE NO REPLY, and said gently

I won't tell you something I want to tell you now . . . something . . . she [illegible] and then—

"I heard what your mother said to you, Mark."

He was silent for a moment, his head bent, and Sondra waited, breathless.

"It wasn't true—at least she [illegible] knew when I was a child how [illegible] Would I believe her now merely because she said it?

"But you are wrong in one respect . . ."

"You've never really known me, Mark—not as I am. I know you love me, but sometimes . . . well love is supposed to be blind, isn't it?" Very much I mind if it hurts you—what I am going to say—but if we're ever going to be happy, we must understand each other, mustn't we, dear?"

Mark turned and looked at her.

"Was Anderson ever your lover?" he asked.

"No—no—never."

There was a little pause and he [illegible]

"Well," he said patiently

Sondra went on

"I've never had any money of my own—I don't think you know that, and I hated being poor. Flora was good to me—while she lived with Ben—but even that wasn't enough . . . I don't think you understand that there are lots of girls in the world like me—girls who take expensive presents from men and think nothing about it—men they don't care anything about—"

MARK INTERRUPTED

"As you did from Anderson—" he interrupted.

"Yes—" she caught her breath "As I did. He was rich, and I didn't see any harm in it—there wasn't, really . . . You see—" she moved her hands helplessly. "I knew you loved me—I loved you too—at least . . . but I was afraid —so I asked him to give you that post—to send you away, because I was afraid. I knew we should be poor and I loathed being poor . . . Then the—when I knew you were really going, I felt as if I couldn't bear it, and so . . . well, you know the rest."

She stopped, with a feeling of amazement at herself. Had she ever loved this man so utterly that she had been driven to make the greatest mistake of her life? She felt as if she was telling him about someone else—repeating a story she had heard.

She went on presently. "Well, you went away—and then Flora left Ben, and I hadn't anything—only a few dollars. I suppose I ought to have told you, but somehow I couldn't. That—Mark—you must try to understand, dear—Mr Anderson asked me to marry him. His wife died—you know that—and so—so I had to tell him that I was already married to you."

A BITTER LAUGH

He [illegible] her face.

"That was hard luck Sondra—a rich man like Anderson—"

She said brokenly, "Don't be unkind Mark—"

"Unkind" [illegible] he opened his eyes [illegible] back with pain "When I was on the way home, I came across a little verse in a book, someone lent me . . . it was this—I can't thing be time across so many miles, so many days that keep us still apart' . . . I thought what rubbish it was—when two people loved one another . . . I don't think so now."

"You don't believe me—you don't believe me—"

I am not fool enough to believe that any man will do for a woman what Anderson has done for you, without some hope of return—no doubt he sent me away because it suited him—to leave the field clear."

Sondra said quietly "You don't know John if you can say that."

There was a little silence, then Mark said dully "And now I suppose I am to be under a fresh obligation to him—this new job—for your sake no doubt, or perhaps to get me out of the way once more. I suppose you are going to tell me I must go alone—"

Sondra's face quivered. "Do you think I should have married you, if I had cared for—for anyone else?" she asked.

MOVED A LITTLE

He hand moved a little, groping for hers

"You ought never to have married me—I've nothing to offer you—I may never have"

"You've given me your love"—Sondra said.

It was like sitting by, watching other people, she thought, she would not believe that it was she herself who was trying to hard, and with such an empty heart, to convince him that she loved him.

He said suddenly: "At lunch today—I suppose Anderson made love to you—I suppose you never thought of me."

"He spoke of you all the time—and of your future."

That was true enough—they had both kept the thought of Mark between them, during one another to forget him.

She said brokenly—"if you can't trust me, Mark, or ever believe in me again, what sort of a future do you think we shall have?"

"It a pity I didn't die . . . you would have been free."

She closed her eyes; often during the last few weeks some such thought had been in her own mind; and now she hated herself for it.

Mark was a sick man; a pitiful man also when one contrasted him with the lover of a few months ago. A sudden wave of infinite pity swept through Sondra's heart. She could no more have hurt him now than she could have hurt a child.

HER OLD SELF

"Perhaps I shan't always feel like this," she told herself wildly. "Perhaps tomorrow I shall be my old self again—wanting a good time . . . wanting—John. I'm not really unselfish—I don't want to sacrifice anything, but all the same . . ."

She felt the tears on her cheeks and she drew her hand from Mark's to wipe them away.

He turned quickly. Sondra" She would not look at him.

"Do you love me, Sondra" If you do—nothing else matters."

For a moment she was silent for a moment a wild impulse came to her to tell him the truth, to say "I love John—let me go—I can't stay with you"

But the moment passed, leaving her weak and shaken.

She had married this man because she had wanted him—was it his fault that she wanted him no longer"

John had said one should always stand by one's mistakes.

She bent her head, smiling through her tears.

"Don't you know I love you?" she said, and she kissed him.

SACRIFICE FOR LOVE

Flora Lomax leaned back in a chair and sawned as she looked across at her sister

"Well—" she said, "I never thought you had it in you, Sondra."

"Had what in me?" Sondra asked. She was touching her cheeks with a little rouge and lightly coloring her lips, they were so pale.

"Sacrifice all for love—or whatever sentiment you call it." Flora said mockingly.

They were in Flora's big house again, and it was October

For the last two months Sondra had been away with Mark down at the sea, and a moment ago he had come into the room, demanding in his old, eager way if everything was packed and warning Sondra not to be late

To Be Concluded Tomorrow.

Financial Market News, Notes and Comment

PROOF THAT SPENDING HAS BEEN RESUMED

By B. C. FORBES

PEOPLE apparently are beginning to spend money.

On Broadway yesterday my attention was attracted by a crowd. Investigation revealed a block-long, three-deep line of people, waiting to get into a motion picture theater.

Several railroads report notable increases in travel.

One reader writes

"Going to a resort, I expected to find the hotel quiet. To my surprise—as well as to the surprise of the hotel owners—more hundreds of seekers arrived than could be accommodated. At the George Gershwin concert at the Lewisohn Stadium in New York the crowd broke all records. The newspapers declared that 17,000 paid 25 cents to $1 for admission and that 4000 had to be turned away."

Complaints multiply, at least in New York, that retailers' stocks are embarrassingly incomplete. The last place I entered couldn't supply what I wanted to buy.

Latest weekly railway reports reveal that traffic on at least some lines has begun to expand. This is new news, perhaps very significant news.

President Merrick of Westinghouse, states:

"Evidences of recuperation are becoming increasingly apparent People are now no longer feeling that the worst is yet to come."

Many Stocks at Year's High

Commercial failures are decreasing

Bank failures have ceased to figure in the newspapers

Borrowing on insurance policies has fallen off

Many stocks are selling at their best 1932 quotations.

Bonds this week moved into new high ground.

Scrap iron, an old-time barometer, has advanced briskly.

Commodities, though mildly irregular, are holding most of their recent gains, and the much-discussed banking plan to finance commodity and material purchases by manufacturers, though overrated, may exercise further stimulating effect.

Declaration of the regular nine per cent American Telephone dividend has made 712,000 stockholders happy—and will give them $41,990,000 cash to spend.

Oil companies have at last turned a long succession of losses into modest profits

Many millions have been added to the inventories of rubber companies by a substantial rise in the stocks of crude

Sales Tax for Pennsylvania

Pennsylvania plans to adopt a general sales tax to raise unemployment funds. A one per cent levy on all sales except to farmers direct to consumers and on real estate is expected to net fully $132,000,000. The success of Mississippi's sales tax lately widely publicized, is influencing other Legislatures

The prospect is that Washington will reconsider a general sales tax at the next session. Sentiment has swung so strongly in favor of this method of raising money that affirmative action is likely.

Railroads and Utilities Rejoice

Railroad and utilities have been made happy by two important decisions.

The Federal District Court dismissed objections raised by terminal companies against the Pennsylvania's plan for door-to-door collection and delivery of freight in New York and Brooklyn

"The Interstate Commerce Commission," the court emphasizes, "will have opportunity to pass upon the question, if it so desires, when the proposed tariff schedules are filed."

The Alabama Public Service Commission decreed that fees paid by two public utilities to their New York holding companies are reasonable. Utility holding shares tumbled tremendously when politicians and regulators launched aggressive attacks upon holding companies and the levies made by them on subsidiary operating companies. Latterly, such shares have recovered substantially, in some instances 200 and even 300 per cent from recent lows. The last has not been heard, however, of opposition to the principle and practices of utility, railway and other holding companies. Unfortunately, the record of such companies has not been in every instance above criticism.

Occasional recessions in securities are normal and healthy. Long sustained, unchecked advances always excite suspicion. Therefore, recent reactions and recoveries are regarded as salutary.

NEW ENGLAND'S NEW BUILDING IS INCREASED

By FRANK B. MELOON

Figures made public today by the Dodge statistical bureau show an increase in New England building awards. The total for the week ended Aug. 12 was $3,23[illegible] in the previous week it totaled $1,844,200, and in the week before that $1,160,200. The weekly average for 1932 to date is $2,317,600.

Investment banking houses report that the great bulk of the recent buying of stocks and bonds is for cash, without much recourse to the once popular margin plan. LEADERS ERASE EARLY GAINS IN WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 19—Leading shares erased early gains of a point or two in trading on the New York Stock Exchange today and displayed irregularity in afternoon transactions.

Rails and shares provided most of the action as the list made its early advance in response to the overnight news of announcement of the $50,000,000 "banking pool" to aid commodity prices.

AIDED BY BUCKLAND

Buying of the railroad shares was also aided by announcement of President E. G. Buckland of the Railroad Credit Corp. that no receivership for major railroads were expected this year. In later dealings the speculative enthusiasm was restrained by failure of commodity prices to "celebrate" the pool announcement.

Gains of a point or so showed in the afternoon for such issues as People's Gas, Union Carbide, Allied Chemical, New Haven, Mack, American Can, American Smelting, Canadian Pacific, Consolidated Gas, and Goodyear. International Business Machines maintained recent gains in order by jumping more than 3 points.

At the same time there were setbacks, mostly fractional, for a wide variety of issues.

As profit-taking sales appeared on the early advance and prices receded from their best, the volume fell off considerably on the reaction pressure, the market reacting on light sales.

MARKET SEEN AS 'TIRED'

Some close observers of the market, who have been on constructive side, say the market is tired and that a sizable shake-out might occur before a resumption of the advance can take place.

There has been considerable buying of Consolidated Gas, both for investment and speculative accounts. It has long since been a favorite stock with many firms trading in public utilities and these believe that there has been quite an increase in the shareholdings recently.

Kansas City Southern Railway, one of the first roads to report for July, had net railway operating income of $61,851 compared with $280,023 for July, 1931. For the seven months ended July the railway operating income totaled $734,708 against $2,123,412 for the same period last year.

Another postponement of the auction of the collateral of Insull Utilities Investment and Corporation Securities Co. held by New York banks has been ordered until Aug. 22, it was announced today.

The auction of Middle West Utilities common stock held by the Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co. and Guaranty Trust Co. as collateral for loans to Insull Utilities Investment and Corporation Securities Co. has also been postponed until Aug. 22.

SIGN OF STEEL UPTURN NOTED

Youngstown, O., Aug. 19 (AP)—Resumption of operation by a blast furnace at the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Company's Campbell plant, around interest here today, for an increase of basic iron production has long been regarded as the best sign of a turn in the steel industry.

The Campbell furnace had been idle since June 4. Its resumption was thought to forecast a possible rise in steel making operations at the Campbell plant.

With this unit in operation, six of the 18 blast furnaces in the district now are making iron. Throughout most of the summer only three or four have been working.

Beverly Loan Award Made to Home Bank

Beverly awarded to Beverly National Bank at 2.39 per cent $100,000 loan dated August 18 and due March 1.

Other bidders were Blake Bros. 2.59 per cent; Second National Bank of Boston, 2.67 per cent; Beverly Trust Co., 2.75 per cent; Merchants National Bank of Salem, 3.07 per cent; Faxon, Gade & Co., 3.12 per cent; Jackson & Curtis, 3.15 per cent.

Closing in London Dealings Is Firm

London, Aug. 19.—The closing on the stock exchange today was firm with British public confidence that the government was fighting effects of the financial crisis. The closing in Paris was steady. In Berlin shares finished firm after early irregularity.

$3,400,000 Purchase by Indiana Standard

Chicago, Aug. 19 (AP)—The Standard Oil Co. of Indiana today announced the purchase for $3,400,000 of certain properties at Neodesha, Kans., of the Standard Oil Co. of Kansas.

Building Awards in New England Larger

New building awards in New England for week ended Aug. 16 were announced today by F. W. Dodge Corp. as $3,336,700, a week ago the total was $1,804,200.

Grace National Bank Reduces Dividend

New York, Aug. 19—Grace National Bank has declared a semi-annual dividend of $2.50, payable Sept. 1 to stockholders of record Aug. 29. Previously $5 was paid semi-annually.

COOK-COOS

By TED COOK

Chicago news item says the police are now equipped with a tear-gas bomb which cannot be thrown back by the intended victim.

Heh, heh! Maybe they're going to stop playing ball with the criminal element.

* * *

Oh, well, it seemed like a good idea at the time.

* * *

NOW THEY'RE GETTING DOWN TO FUNDAMENTALS

(News Item)

Moscow—British socialists, here on an inspection tour, declare that the women of Russia use too much lipstick, and favor a Communist decree forbidding painted lips.

* * *

"But nevertheless," says the Rt. Rev. Wiley, "gals who don't know where to draw the line seldom hesitate."

* * *

And relatives on the Congressional payroll show pretty conclusively that blood is thicker than promises of economy.

* * *

Q. and A. DEPARTMENT

Dear Sympathetic Aunt Bella—Do you ever stop to wonder what it's all about?—Anxious.

Ans.—Now and then, dearie. It seems to work very well on a certain brand of umpchay.

—Aunt (Field General) Bella.

* * *

Onward, ever onward:

Aberdeen, Miss.—Aberdeen ministers, in an attempt to beat the heat wave, have agreed to hold joint services Sunday night at the municipal swimming pool.

* * *

NO?

(Movie Magazine)

Generally the marriage of a man of limited means to a woman of wealth effects unpleasant comment from those who choose to believe he wed her for her money. In Hollywood poor men marry rich women and no acurrious remarks follow.

* * *

Moronia burst out in her baritone laugh when she read the headline—

"GOOD TIMES ASSURED BY 1933"

"As for myself," she boomed, "I ain't gonna wait that long.

* * *

And then she grabbed the janitors mop, and chucked him under the chin.

* * *

"And tripped over the suds bucket."

* * *

Sign on a Chicago tailor's window—

STILL OPERATING WALK IN

They certainly get away with moider in that town, don't they, pal?

MORAL INDIGNATION DEPARTMENT

WASHINGTON—Senator Joe T. Robinson, Democratic leader, charged Secretaries Mills, Hurley and Hyde with neglecting their official duties to make partisan political speeches.

* * *

Mills and Hurley and Hyde
Are behaving in a manner very snide:
Playing hookey from your duties
To dilate on Hoover's beauties
Is a thing we Democrats cannot abide.
Talking free and shouting wide,
Mr. Hurley, Mills and Hyde
Show this is no time to loaf,
Merely working for the people:
Show the officeholding oaf
Who is really worth his keep!
Rave and prove his heart is in
Doings that are partisan—
Helping out to get the nation
Sold on the Administration.
Mills and Hurley and Hyde
Are behaving in a manner very snide
For neglecting any duties
To dilate on Hoover's beauties
Is a thing we Democrats cannot abide.

—Ray Max.

WISE CRACK, 1906—

"Your face is familiar, but I don't know where to put it."

AMERICAN TRAGEDY

(New York Paper)

Charles Lee Smith's latest fight for freedom of speech was terminated abruptly yesterday when A. Smith, the president of the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism, discovered that he could not blow himself arrested in the interests of the cause.

* * *

FAMOUS LAST WORDS

I know exactly what you're going to say.

* * *

Stand by for the correct time.

U. S. Delegates on Way to Madrid

By N. F. T.

Broadcasting barons from all parts of the earth are making tracks for Madrid, Spain. An International Radio Conference takes place there to review progress, discuss present problems and plan for future development in the world wireless realm. Delegates from this country sailed aboard the S. S. President Roosevelt from New York on Wednesday.

UNCLE SAM SITS IN

Among American officials attending the opening session on September 3 are Judge Eugene Sykes, acting chairman of the Federal Radio Commission, Walter Lichtenstein, Chicago banker, W. G. H. Finch of Hearst Radio Service, Irvin Stewart, representing the State Department, and Dr. Charles Jolliffe, Federal Radio Commission Chief Engineer.

• • •

Transatlantic exchange of programs between the United States and countries of Europe will be one of the principal subjects before the gathering. Unity concerning restrictions and a general promoting of world peace by means of continued radio relationships are matters also scheduled to be given considerable attention.

THIS EAR—THAT AIR

Gracie Allen, of Burns and Allen, also the funniest gal yet produced in radio-land, started out with her "my brother" business, just to work up her comedy . . . She has made gold fetishists "brother" quite a character with listeners, while her real brother, George, out on the West Coast, gets a great ribbing among his friends and fellows he works with on a California oil company payroll . . . Tony Wons comes back early next month—as your "missin' 'im" . . . WWJ in Detroit is 12 years old tomorrow . . . Movie studio directors report how Vincent Lopez screens like a million dollars. What's more, they say he looks well with the best of film favorites. So if Vince ever abandons his baton, Clark Gable, Clive Brook and George Barnes can safely rejoice . . . NBC networks originally reserved a half hour for the opening campaign speech of Governor Roosevelt, scheduled tomorrow afternoon. Now they've extended the time and Democratic standard bearer Roosevelt holds forth three-quarters of an hour while his voice vibrates through New England over WBZ between 5 and 5:45 p. m.

LOCAL LATHER

There's very likely to be some click news any day now about a local boy making good in a big way on the waves. That is, if what he deserves is coming to him when present negotiations close. Fourth Boston will be particularly proud, then, even more so than now and that's saying . . . With the "oo-yum" here all set to tune in on a favorite Edgar Allen Poe tale ("The Gold Bug") slated for dramatic presentation at 8:30 tonight, (WBZ) along comes an announcement saying you won't be heard. Some sketch called "Candle Lights in Time" is substituted. By Jingo, if it isn't real, there'll be at least one dial hereabouts detouring over toward WNAC and the Kostelanetz concert. Imagine! Then again those hot Hawaiians back on WLOE at the same hour make mean listening, too . . . Looking to Ben Alley and Nils T. Granlund, backstage at Loew's Orpheum proved pleasant. Especially when elect manager Vic Morris sauntered thru while N. T. G. was conversing with P. D. Cody. Vic "just a couple of Men of Letters—eh." The wit . . . Linus (WAAB) Travers didn't tell fotks who "The Moon Killer" actually was last night during his goose fleshy preview based on the tackle "Dr. . . ." yet suspicion among a lot of interested listeners somehow centers on that "Dr. Wells." However, all this typewriter tapper ever ran down have been rubber heels and crooners. Let's go satisfy ourselves by seeing the screen solution . . . Jack Shannon and Marie Stoddard ("The Gossipers") asked their air audience for a few earphones to give hospital shut-ins. That was a week or so back and 20 headpieces was their immediate need. Over 300 pairs have been sent in since and still they arrive.

Commerce Head Urges Sales Tax as Trade Stimulant

The recent election to the presidency of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States of that genuine economic liberal, H. I. Harriman, of Boston, was an event of far-reaching importance.

While less able men are seeking to guess the turn, Mr. Harriman is fruitful in suggesting to his countrymen a substantial program of thoroughgoing rehabilitation.

After suggesting a twenty-five per cent cut in the expenditures of government, Mr. Harriman, in his recent radio broadcast, proposed drastic revision of the system of taxation.

Suggesting the sales tax as the OBVIOUS WAY OUT of a serious situation, this official spokesman for organized business in the United States declared:

"Our whole system of taxation, national, state and municipal, which bears down upon us like an ill-adjusted pack saddle, should be overhauled. We have depended too much upon income and corporation taxes, and other taxes resting on a narrow base.

"The time is at hand when the national government should give consideration to the manufacturers' sales tax, and municipal governments should weigh the possibilities of a retail sales tax, not primarily as a source of additional income, but as a partial substitute for the over-heavy burden laid upon real property and certain classes of productive industry."

At last organized business has spoken clearly on the tax problem.

Congress in the last session was unfortunately befuddled by the lack of clear cut, consistent advice on tax questions from business. Too many groups selfishly asked the national Legislature to spare them, and tax the other fellow. As a result, instead of wisely adopting a GENERAL MANUFACTURERS' SALES TAX spread thin, it authorized special and discriminatory excise taxes spread thick. Retail business men, who had not thought the problem through, turned their voices against the sales tax.

The advocacy of the sales tax by Mr. Harriman is another landmark in the building up of intelligent public opinion in favor of the GENERAL SALES TAX.

As the head of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States indicated, the sales tax will enable Congress to stimulate business by giving tax relief in other directions.

The heartening of employers will result in better opportunities for gainful employment—and in this the 10,000,000 unemployed and their families are acutely interested.

At its next session in December, Congress should reopen the tax question and substitute scientific legislation for the PRESENT HODGEPODGE law.

The sales tax and an excise tax on wines and beer, which should be legalized, will produce ADEQUATE REVENUE PAINLESSLY, and stimulate prosperity through the reduction of trade-destroying tax burdens.

Let's Improve the Record

Boston Has Smallest Auto Death Rate

The United States Department of Commerce told us a few months ago that the retail trade area of Greater Boston was the richest in the United States.

By that it meant that more money for retail trade is spent per capita in Greater Boston than in any other of the great metropolitan districts of this country.

Today we learn another interesting fact, highly favorable to Boston, and from the same official source.

It is that Boston is freer from fatal automobile accidents within its gates than any of the other metropolitan districts of vast population.

In the fifty-two weeks just ended our death rate from auto accidents was 13.3 per 100,000 of population. Baltimore, for example, was 17.5; Los Angeles, 27.0; Pittsburgh, 20.1; Philadelphia, 15.6; New York, 17.2.

We have much to be proud of, much to pat ourselves on the back for as our records, in many fields, are matched against those of the other sections of this glorious country.

A temporary record, however, is not of so much value. Let us not only maintain it, but improve it. If we would think of those who have been sacrificed to auto recklessness, of the sorrow that has been brought into the homes of these people, our future will shine even more brilliantly among the standards of our sister municipalities. Let's do THAT.

Home Loan Bank Bill

Is State Using It to Help Owners?

The Dorchester Board of Trade is entitled to a dignified and prompt answer by Bank Commissioner Guy to the question:

"What, if anything, has the State of Massachusetts done to avail itself of the national Home Loan Bank Bill?"

This law was intended to relieve the home-owners who are being pressed on their mortgages and this Board of Trade can be assumed to speak the interest of a section of Boston which has a population of 200,000, of whom 30,000 are home-owners.

Congress has made several hundred millions of dollars available to relieve the owners of the one, two and three-family homes, which are the very fabric of American existence. The natural question is, "How much of this money is available to Massachusetts, and has the State made any provision to apply for its share?"

Some of the bankers tell us that this home-loan idea is a monstrosity conceived by the "miracle men" at Washington; that it will create a new and unnecessary banking superstructure that will muddle and impede the ordinary flow of credit to the home-owners. We cannot find ourselves convinced that their opposition is perfectly and wholly sound.

In any event, the home-owners of Massachusetts are entitled to know the attitude of the State and whether the officials are availing themselves sincerely and genuinely of every implement of relief. They certainly have not done so for relief of the depositors, $75,000,000 of whose savings funds are still sequestered in the closed banks.

New York Day by Day

Thoughts While Strolling

NEW YORK Aug. 19—Thoughts while strolling: The Mammy song all of a sudden goes Mom. One word description of Genevieve Tobin—posey. Whatever became of the vaudevillian, Artie Mehlinger? Those jungle-like peepings from subway gratings. Nobody can grin like George Olsen.

Earl Carroll's ruddy brother, Jim. And his big cigot. When I pass the Claridge corner, I think of Tommy Gray. He passed Marcus Loew and Lee Shubert there one morning and flipped: "Hi Lee, Hi Loew!" Stanley Rinehart, a Pittsburgh, Pa., boy, who made good in the city. Frank Lawlor is a miniature Victor Moore.

What we once called a "brat" is now a "modern child." I've often wished at parties I could jump up and do Pat Rooney's dance. Jesse Lasky's glasses always seem about to fall off. There appears to be a panic in "It," also. Or is it my years? Heywood Broun's Hawvahd accent.

Mary Boland is remindful of a flushed apple tree in Normandy. Doesn't seem right for Blanche Ring and Charles Winninger to be apart. There he goes—writhing in. Dennis King has a romantic swagger off stage, too. It's a convenient alibi—all the big financiers playing broke. But what hooey!

Overheard: "And now winter. So what?" Dull-eyed sandwich men—caught in life's undertow. But they have company. Eva La Gallienne is a statue in chalk. They say theatrical people sprinkle salt in letters for good luck. Roger Wolfe Kahn eating in an albino-tiled restaurant.

For some reason, I miss those brisk fellows who used to try to sell us lots in the Ozone Parks and Fairview Manors. I want to say "hey, hey!" after Edna St. Vincent Millay. They've sent me a monkey, two horned toads and a Siamese cat, so far this year. Any day now, I'm expecting a pet bison.

* * *

I never got around to seeing Warner Baxter on the screen until a recent night. It was one of those syrupy scenarios splattered with a few bladder swats, but I came away feeling a finished artist was again neck-deep in Hollywood piffle. Remind me to do something about the talkies!

* * *

No people interest me so much as circus folk. There is a tug in their forthright simplicity. Clyde Beatty, twice daily facing the furious slashes of a cage of mixed lions and tigers, proves to be an Ohio farm boy, fearful to enter an avenue haberdashery for a muffler he fancied in the window. Too, when Lillian Leitzel, whose tragic fall deprived the big-top of its acknowledged queen. Somewhere on my desk is a post-card sent shortly before her passing. She was at the Cirque d'Hiver in Paris and wrote: "Chestnut trees will soon be in beautiful white bloom." It impressed me with its naivete, because in the same mail came a scribble from an American vaudevillian. "Wowing them at the Casino de Paris. Eiffel Tower will blink my name yet."

* * *

Walking along East 17th street today, I recognized a block where a dead-and-gone beer hall once flourished. It featured blackish brew with a fine-grained, bubbly head like shaving lather—an ebony fathom cuffed in cream. As I recall, it bore the name "Kulmbacher." Anyway, there was a depressing Saturday noon when a whistling copy boy flopped on official envelope before me. A curt note read: "Your services will not be needed after today." What galled most was the indefinable pity of my fellow copy readers. They knew. Newspaper shops, like the jungle, have a mysterious telegraphy. As I looked up none could meet my gaze. Anyway, I stepped into the rake-hell glamour of this beer hall to fortify myself for the ordeal of telling my wife. Downing two, I went home and lied, in a miraculous manner, that I had a better job. What is more, by Monday I did have. Ah, glorious Kulmbacher!

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

What Is Right?

"I'M A YOUNG MAN," says he, "and I want to do what is right. But everything seems so muddled to me. Can you tell me what Is right and what Is wrong?"

Elsie Robinson

No, I can't, son.

I might know what is right for me. But I couldn't possibly know what is right for you.

AND, AS A MATTER OF FACT, THAT WHICH WOULD BE RIGHT FOR ME WOULD NOT BE RIGHT FOR YOU. FOR THERE IS NO ABSOLUTE RIGHT . . . NO DEFINITE RULE FOR GOODNESS.

There are certain acts which, for our common convenience, we have declared to be wrong . . . such as murder, trickery, theft. Often even these acts may seem justified in individual cases. Yet, nevertheless, the human race has decided to put a closed season on them all. And sensible people no longer argue over their rightness or wrongness.

But these acts form but a very small part of human behavior. Only on rare occasions, if ever, will you be tempted to kill or steal or cheat.

BUT YOUR DAYS WILL BE FILLED WITH DECISIONS AND ACTS WHICH MAY BE WRONG OR MAY BE RIGHT—AND NO ONE CAN TELL YOU WHICH THEY ARE!

YOU ARE THE ONLY ONE ON EARTH THAT CAN TELL WHETHER THE THING YOU ARE DOING IS GOOD OR BAD.

There are millions of ways of being good—and millions of ways of being bad. And each man must decide for himself just which is HIS way.

Consider the number seven. Seven is a simple number. But many combinations may make seven.

Four and three make seven.

Five and two mak: seven.

Six and one make seven.

Two and four and one make seven.

Work it out for yourself. You'll be surprised to discover how many combinations of numbers will make seven.

AND IN EXACTLY THE SAME WAY THERE ARE MANY CHARACTER COMBINATIONS WHICH WILL MAKE "RIGHT."

The aggressive man has one way of being Right.

The shrinking man has another way of being Right.

The thoughtful man still another . . . and the impulsive man still another.

Each man must work out rightness in his own way. Yet each one of the various ways is right.

SO YOU MUST LEARN YOUR OWN COMBINATION, SON. You must learn what's right for YOU!

You can't be right by copying MY way—nor by copying yours. You must learn the formula that fits your own vision and your own disposition.

You must KNOW YOURSELF. On the other hand, if you refuse to KNOW YOURSELF you insist on COPYING OTHER PEOPLE . . . SHAPING YOUR CONDUCT TO SUIT THE NOTIONS OF OTHER PEOPLE . . . then life will always be a shabby, unsatisfactory, compromise. You may be rich and popular and famous—but in your own heart you will know you are a fake. And nothing that you will do will ever give satisfaction or content.

LEARN AND FOLLOW THE LAW OF YOUR OWN NATURE.

LEARN AND RESPECT THE LAW OF THE OTHER FELLOW'S NATURE.

Follow these two rules, son, and you won't get far off the trail.

Just Folks

Legal Question

Well, I suppose it's hardly fair
When I have settled down to sleep,
That Merry Little Tousled Hair
With shouts should break my slumber deep.
And there must be a law, I'm sure,
Upon the books in black and white
Such grave disturbances to cure,
Defining clearly what is right.
While naught I know of legal lore,
I'm certain that I recollect
Some statement I have heard before
That others' rights we must respect;
That citizens, however free
Their chosen pleasures to enjoy,
Are duty-bound to careful be
Lest others' comfort they destroy.
I could call a policeman in
And bid the brave blue-coated chap
To stop this most tumultuous din
When I would take my mid-day nap.
He'd quell those shriekings of delight,
And drive Miss Tousled Hair away
And force that crowd of youngsters bright
To seek some other spot to play.
I have a right to sleep, and yet
The calm required I'll not exact,
Those lonely days I can't forget
When peace was an accomplished fact.
So let them shriek and let them shout
And let Miss Tousled Hair be glad,
I'll try to get along without
The mid-day nap that can't be had.

HEARST PAPERS ADVOCATE

1—The five billion dollar loan to relieve unemployment and put billions of dollars into immediate circulation.

2—Adoption of 5 per cent sales tax and reduction in income taxes, releasing income to finance industry.

3—Immediate modification of the Volstead act, permitting light wines and beers, reviving industry and employment, providing government income, ending racketeering and restoring American personal liberty.

Secretary Mills and His 'Veterans'

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Boston Evening American.

IT MAY WELL BE DOUBTED if any one but Ogden Mills would have had the temerity to refer, as he did recently, to the Administration group as "veterans" to be kept on guard. Perhaps Mr. Hurley, who thinks the unemployed and the harassed business man should "shift for themselves," could match Mr. Mills in this delicious arrogance, so hard to associate with the record made. If any branch of the government has been more inept than any other or shown less knowledge of its own business than the Treasury under Mr. Mills we cannot name it.

When Congress was called upon to increase taxes relentlessly to meet the Hoover deficit, and plans made were constantly set aside it was not due to the incapacity of the lawmakers, but to their inability to learn from Mills, "the veteran," as he proudly styles himself, the extent of the deficit. Apparently he did not know. Seemingly he could not guess even remotely. Senator Robinson said in the Senate, without a challenge, that neither Mr. Mellon nor Mr. Mills had been able to furnish Congress with an intelligent estimate of the receipts of the Treasury. Here is the assertion of the Democratic floor leader that no one on the Administration side of the aisle challenged:

"Scarcely in a single instance have their estimates come within a hundred million dollars, in some cases the variance being $600,000,000 of the actual amount."

Only a "veteran" could miss the mark so enormously.

* * *

Demand to Wipe Out U. S. Deficit

Everyone wanted the budget balanced, and the Hoover deficit, which this year alone was only twenty-five per cent less than the cost of the Civil War, wiped out.

It was not an easy task to find the taxes, not nearly so simple as simple-minded critics seemed to think. It will be recalled that while Congress was grappling with this problem, thrown into its lap by the "veterans," the critics of press and politics and business were jeering at the Congress. Why didn't it have brains enough to know the budget must be balanced? And why, when it had a plan prepared, did it forthwith throw it in the waste-basket and start all over again?

Had these members of House and Senate no brains at all?

* * *

Finally Reports Much Bigger Deficit

Well, what was the trouble? If brains were involved it was the brains of the Administration and particularly of the Treasury.

Here was the trouble. How much is the deficit and how much must be raised? asked Congress. And Mr. Mills and the Treasury gave the amount. Congress with a microscope, looking for new sources of revenue, finally had a bill perfected.

And then Mr. Mills and the Treasury appeared to announce that the revenue had been greatly overestimated and a new and much huger deficit was named.

Into the waste-basket then with the bill; and again Congress got out its microscope to find still more possible sources of revenue.

And during the delay the simple-minded critics jeered the louder—at Congress.

In the presence of the spokesmen of the Administration, on the floor of the Senate, Senator Tydings made this statement:

"One afternoon, while the tax bill was before us for consideration, the Secretary of the Treasury (Mr. Mil's) and the Administration spokesman in the Senate said that the budget was balanced. The very next morning, at 11 o'clock, the same people, Mr. Mills and Administration spokesman here, admitted it was $275,000,000 short."

No one challenged that assertion. The Administration spokesman, thus referred to his presence, did not whimper. Tydings told the truth.

* * *

Failed to Reduce Government Costs

Then, again, we have heard much about how Congress has prevented Mr. Hoover from drastically cutting the cost of government. Everyone knows he promised to reorganize the government in his campaign in 1928. Everyone knows he did nothing of the sort. Everyone should know that he had forgotten all about it until Congress began to act; and then he became as much interested for the session of 1932 as he had in that of 1928.

Nothing worth while has been done; and the Hurleys, Mills, Hydes now have the impudence to complain that Congress stood in the President's way.

Who's hazing?

Under existing law, Mr. Hoover had the power to abolish or consolidate bureaus, and everyone knows that these duplicating, overlapping and unnecessary bureaus are a national scandal.

Has he consolidated or abolished? He has not.

* * *

Cabinet Fought Senate Cut Plans

Instead, while doing nothing, he asked Congress to give him arbitrary dictatorial power to do anything with the government he saw fit. And Congress, or the Senate, replied with the invitation of 1932 as he had in that of 1928.

Nothing worth while has been done; and the Hurleys, Mills, Hydes now have the impudence to complain that Congress stood in the President's way.

Who's hazing?

Under existing law, Mr. Hoover had the power to abolish or consolidate bureaus, and everyone knows that these duplicating, overlapping and unnecessary bureaus are a national scandal.

Has he consolidated or abolished? He has not.

* * *

Public Aware of True Facts

It is evident that the "veterans" hope to confuse the public this Summer and Fall with a vast amount of buncombe. It will be neither new nor wise. Business men and the jobless have been following proceedings in Washington with an intelligence surprised by suffering and fear. They know what the issues are; and they expect to see both parties meet them frankly with facts.

"The only party fit to govern" has a sorry sound today and "veterans" is a poor disguise for the shabby shibboleth shot full of holes with tragic facts.
